Reflection on the Feast of the Epiphany

A Homily by Pope Francis

“Where is the child who has been born king of the Jews? For we have observed His star in the East, and have come to worship Him” (Mt 2:2).

With these words, the Magi tell us the reason for their long journey: they came to worship the newborn King. The star did not shine just for them, nor did they have special abilities to be able to see it. Their hearts were open to the horizon and they could see what the heavens were showing them, for they were guided by an inner restlessness. They were open to something new. The Magi thus personify all those who believe, those who long for God and their heavenly homeland. They reflect those who have not let their hearts become anesthetized.

A holy longing for God wells up in the hearts of believers because they know that the Gospel is not an event of the past but of the present. A holy longing for God helps us keep alert in the face of every attempt to reduce and impoverish our life. A holy longing for God is the memory of faith, which rebels before all prophets of doom. That longing keeps hope alive in the community of believers, which from week to week continues to plead, “Come, Lord Jesus”. This same longing led the elderly Simeon to go up each day to the Temple, certain that his life would not end before he had held the Savior in his arms. This longing led the Prodigal Son to abandon his self-destructive lifestyle and to seek his father’s embrace. This was the longing felt by the shepherd who left the ninety-nine sheep in order to seek out the one that was lost. Mary Magdalene experienced the same longing on that Sunday morning when she ran to the tomb and met her risen Master.

Longing for God draws us out of our iron-clad isolation, which makes us think that nothing can change. Longing for God shatters our dreary routines and impels us to make the changes we want and need. Longing for God has its roots in the past yet does not remain there: it reaches out to the future. Believers who feel this longing are led by faith to seek God, as the Magi did, in the most distant corners of history, for they know that there the Lord awaits them. They go to the peripheries, to the frontiers, to places not yet evangelized, to encounter their Lord. They do not do this out of a sense of superiority, but rather as those who cannot ignore the eyes of those for whom the Good News is still uncharted territory.

An entirely different attitude reigned in the palace of Herod, a short distance from Bethlehem. As the Magi made their way, Jerusalem slept. It slept in collusion with a Herod who, rather than seeking, also slept. He slept, anesthetized by a cauterized conscience. He was bewildered, afraid—as one who sits atop his wealth yet cannot see beyond it or of those who want to control everything and everyone or of those immersed in the culture of winning at any cost. Herod was afraid, and that fear led him to seek security in crime: “You kill the little ones because fear is killing you in your heart” (St. Quodvultdeus, Sermon 2 on the Creed).

An entirely different attitude reigned in the palace of Herod, a short distance from Bethlehem. As the Magi made their way, Jerusalem slept. It slept in collusion with a Herod who, rather than seeking, also slept. He slept, anesthetized by a cauterized conscience. He was bewildered, afraid—as one who sits atop his wealth yet cannot see beyond it or of those who want to control everything and everyone or of those immersed in the culture of winning at any cost. Herod was afraid, and that fear led him to seek security in crime: “You kill the little ones because fear is killing you in your heart” (St. Quodvultdeus, Sermon 2 on the Creed).

Those men came from the East to worship, and they came to do so in the place befitting a king: a palace. Their quest led them there, for it was fitting that a king should be born in a palace, amid a court and all his subjects. For that is a sign of power, success, a life of achievement. One might well expect a king to be venerated, feared, and adulated. True, but not necessarily loved. For those are worldly categories, the paltry idols to which we pay homage: the cult of power, outward appearances, and superiority. Idols that promise only sorrow and enslavement.

It was there, in that place, that those men, come from afar, would embark upon their longest journey. There they set out boldly on a more arduous and complicated journey. They had to discover that what they sought was not in a palace, but elsewhere, both existentially and geographically. There, in the palace, they did not see the star guiding them to discover a God who wants to be loved. For only under the banner of freedom, not tyranny, is it possible to realize that the gaze of this unknown but desired king does not abase, enslave, or imprison us. To realize that the gaze of God lifts up, forgives, and heals. To realize that God wanted to be born where we least expected, or perhaps desired, in a place where we so often refuse Him. To realize that in God’s eyes there is always room for those who are wounded, weary, mistreated, and abandoned. That His strength and His power are called mercy. How far Jerusalem is from Bethlehem!

Herod is unable to worship God because he could not or would not change his own way of looking at things. He did not want to stop worshipping himself, believing that everything revolved around him. He was unable to worship God, because his aim was to make others worship him. Nor could the scribes or Pharisees worship God in truth, because although they had great knowledge and knew the prophecies, they were not ready to make the journey or to change their ways.

The Magi experienced longing as they were all too familiar with, and weary of, the Herods of their own day. But there, in Bethlehem, was a promise of newness. There something new was taking place. The Magi were able to worship because they had the courage to set out. As they fell to their knees before the small, poor, and vulnerable Infant, the unexpected and unknown Child of Bethlehem, they discovered the glory of God.

PERPETUAL ADORATION

All are invited to our Adoration Chapel (24 hours a day, seven days a week) to adore our Lord in the Blessed Sacrament. It is locked between 5:00 p.m. and 6:00 a.m., so anyone wishing to come during those hours needs to get an electronic key from the offices (during open hours). Keys are $20 each (refundable if you move away).

"Where is the new-born King of the Jews?" inquired the three Magi of Herod, king of Jerusalem. "Where is He?" they repeat in their great desire to find Him. "We have seen His star in the East, and we have come to adore Him. Ah, tell us where He is; we desire so much to see Him; we have made so long a journey in order to become acquainted with Him!"

But now there is no need of traveling far or of making many inquiries to find Him. He is, as we know by faith, in our churches, not far from our homes. The Magi could find Him in one place only; we can find Him in every part of the world, wherever the Blessed Sacrament is kept. Are we then not happier than those who lived at the time of our Savior Himself?

-Fr. Michael Muller, C.S.S.R.
