Congratulations to Brooklyn Sutter who has won a free Jersey Mike's sub! Listen closely to the announcements, Chemics, so you can have a chance to win prize! There are 3 more opportunities this month to be a winner.

Porter Pritchard will read the announcement below:

Chemics, did you know that Hiram Rhodes Revels was the first Black U.S. Senator? In 1870, during Reconstruction, he shattered barriers by representing Mississippi in the U.S. Senate. Hiram Rhodes Revels was a fierce advocate for racial equality, education, and civil rights. He used his platform as a U.S. Senator to push for progress in a changing America. His story reminds us that Black voices in government matter then and now.

Please take time this week to notice the various displays in Eyeball Alley that honor the contributions that African Americans have made to our country in many forms. It is MHS MISSION MONDAY!

"Everything we do is a representation of Chemic Pride". Chemics are ACCOUNTABLE.

Accountability means taking ownership of one's actions and responsibilities. It means always giving one's best effort. Practicing accountability in school sets students up for success in their future workplaces and life commitments.

Accountability can sound intimidating or stressful for students, but really, it's the only way anything gets done. Teachers need to hold students accountable for their actions, but students must also learn to hold themselves accountable.

- Avoid unnecessary absences or arriving late.
- Have any necessary equipment ready when it is needed (completed assignments, writing utensils and notebooks, gym clothes, charged Chromebook, etc.).
- This means completing and submitting assignments on time, reviewing classwork at home, and coming to classes with enthusiasm and a positive attitude.
- Everyone makes mistakes. However, making excuses for your actions or assigning blame does not demonstrate accountability.
- When someone makes a mistake, accountability means acknowledging the mistake and taking steps to remedy it. This demonstrates that they have learned from their mistakes. Remember, actions speak louder than words.

How will you show that you are an Accountable Chemic this week?
