WCSD OBSERVED BULLYING PREVENTION MONTH

Bullying Prevention Month, celebrated every October, is dedicated to promoting kindness and respect while raising awareness about the harmful effects of bullying. It represents a collective effort among students, teachers, parents, and communities to create safe and supportive learning environments where everyone feels valued.

Bullying can take various forms—physical, verbal, social, or online—and its impact can be long-lasting. By recognizing Bullying Prevention Month, schools can encourage open discussions about empathy, respect, and how to safely stand up against bullying behavior.

We extend our gratitude to Mr. Castle and his assistants for providing awareness lessons in all K-12 schools. Ongoing awareness is essential. Teachers, school counselors, and behavior interventionists should incorporate lessons on empathy and citizenship into their classes and groups. They can also encourage students to participate in activities that promote cooperation and kindness. Remember, anti-bullying messages should resonate throughout the entire year, not just in October. Together, we can foster a culture where everyone feels safe, supported, and empowered. — Dr. Ernestine Young, Office of Federal Programs
