

Student Services Board Report

Our new literacy initiative at LSSC is officially underway!

Read with Me...

In January, the LSSC partnered with Houston County Family Connections to launch a five-month literacy initiative, Read with Me. The series is designed to support parents and children. This will feature monthly events throughout the year, with two events taking place in January.

The kickoff event included a Resiliency Training for parents, where participants learned valuable coping skills and strategies to support their children's literacy development. The training was designed to equip parents with tools to foster positive, productive learning experiences at home. Meanwhile, children enjoyed a lively and engaging puppet show, which helped spark their imaginations and set the tone for the literacy journey ahead.

Be on the lookout for more collaborative effort to strengthen both family resilience and literacy skills.

Thank You Delta Sigma Theta

We are incredibly grateful to the phenomenal women of the Warner Robins Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta, Inc. Sorority for their generous donation of hygiene items to our Resource Room! These essential supplies will benefit Houston County residents in need, and we are excited to begin distributing them to our community. Thank you for your kindness and support!

Book Donation

On January 24, 2025, Larry Wadsworth generously donated a collection of books to the LSSC library. These books will be utilized in various ways, including enriching the resources available at the Literacy Center at the LSSC. Additionally, they will be part of an upcoming lending library, designed to provide after-hours access to books for community members.

Mr. Wadsworth's donation is a significant contribution to our mission of fostering literacy and supporting learning in our community. We are grateful for his support and look forward to the positive impact these books will have.

Slime for Self-Regulation

The Huntington Middle School Social Skills classes have been learning self-regulation tools from the Zones of Regulation curriculum. One of these tools is called “Feel and Fidgets,” which uses tactile activities to help students focus, relax, and pay attention. This week, the class had fun making slime. Slime is a suggested “Feel and Fidget” activity to engage the sense of touch and improve regulation.

Project AWARE Training

Project AWARE recently held a two-day training session focused on verbal de-escalation techniques for supporting children and young people in crisis. The session was based on the LifeSpace Crisis Intervention model, a therapeutic approach designed to manage chronic crisis behaviors and turn difficult moments into learning opportunities. Participants, including educators, counselors, and school leaders, gained valuable crisis management strategies.

Project AWARE plans to continue offering these sessions to provide evidence-based tools to improve support for students with disruptive or self-defeating behaviors and to foster a positive learning environment.

Social Worker Workshop

Six school social workers attended the 2nd Annual Lead School Social Worker workshop hosted by the Georgia Department of Education's Office of Whole Child Supports. The event featured expert speakers and focused on key issues impacting students. Topics included grief support for students and strategies for coping with loss, as well as using data to address chronic absenteeism. The workshop provided valuable professional development, equipping social workers with tools to enhance student support and well-being.

Scoliosis Screening

Georgia law mandates annual scoliosis screenings for public school children in at least two grades during early adolescence.

Scoliosis is defined as a spine curvature over 10 degrees, and signs can include uneven shoulder height, a protruding shoulder blade, uneven waist folds, or varying arm hang distance. In collaboration with the Health Department, school nurses will screen 6th and 8th grade students from February 3rd-14th. Approximately 3,700 students will be tested. Early detection is crucial to prevent future issues related to posture and spine compression. The Health Department will follow up with parents whose students present symptoms.
