230	Actually teaching	1/27/2026 6:52 PM
231	Instead of looking at just data to determine if a student needs extra assistance or going straight to behavioral plans, the school needs to actually use the IDEA act and start earlier interventions especially if they're legally obligated to. Parents should not be pushed to get a doctor's diagnosis and medication before the school will use their resources to get the child additional help. Schools shouldn't be relying on " data" if they're not going to accurately record data. There's needs to be a better system in place.	1/27/2026 6:48 PM

702	More small group opportunities. However the school has been good with sharing the reading program and sending home passages for students to practice reading g and comprehension. One practice that is interesting is that students have to learn the heart (sight) words and know how to spell them. That is a lot for a kindergarten student especially those who come without any prior schooling.	1/23/2026 12:49 PM

1164	Letting the parents know on a weekly basis what topics they will be working on in class. If this was available I could review these topics over the weekend before they get to class. Being able to engage the student on a weekend and exposing them to the unknown before they go to class would boost their confidence, in my opinion. Math is not only numbers, it includes words that a child may have or have never seen and with numbers already being intimidating to some children, I believe having a parent expose them and engage them to the words and definitions will help boost not only grades, but confidence and building a stronger bond between child and parent as they navigate the curriculum. As a parent I would like to know what topics in math they are working on. Most of the time my child acts as they have no clue what they did in class.	1/20/2026 6:52 PM

1401	I feel it could have helped in the beginning of school to start sending home words and sentences to focus on. I asked if there were things we could work on at home but was told that they cover so much in class that they want the kids to have fun at home. Now going into the second semester words and reading has started to come home which I feel is late in the school year. I work with him at home by reading books but it would have helped in the 1st semester to know what words are being covered at school as well. Also the newsletter is very basic in what is being covered during the upcoming week.	1/19/2026 3:56 PM

2017	Teachers should demonstrate greater compassion, not only towards their profession but also towards the children they educate daily. My child frequently mentions that some educators appear petty and condescending. I believe that many teachers and school staff lack genuine passion for their work; if they truly cared, they would make additional efforts to ensure their students comprehend the material presented. Furthermore, it is imperative to cease the assumption that a child will be merely a statistic based solely on their race. Instead, take the time to genuinely understand each child instead of passing judgment.	1/14/2026 5:31 PM

1371	Stop relying on technology for the students and teach them proper spelling/grammar as well as REAL math, not "common core" and I was told with my son, now 17, that his teacher was not good at spelling (her words) and that they dont need to know how to spell or learn grammer because the "computer does it dor them". These kids need to be taught like WE were taught to think on their own and not rely on "AI" or "ChatGBT" to become amazing citizens/students. Also, "common core" math is a waste of time and foes around your butt to get to your elbown when the correct way is efficient. This generation can't even do proper math (meaning at fast food / general stores)/ Stop dumbing down children.	1/15/2026 2:44 PM

1669	Communication is an essential topic to initiate discussions. Often, parents simply attempt to reach out to assist their child; however, teachers may become offended, perceiving such efforts as personal attacks. This misunderstanding not only prolongs the issue but can exacerbate it. Teachers and administrative staff should undertake all necessary measures to ensure that the child receives appropriate support in a timely manner.	1/14/2026 5:59 PM

passwords and usernames, having to call the office to log in. It's all ridiculous. Give me a piece of paper with a calendar on it, and an agenda telling me what my kid needs to do. Stop relying on people relying on their phone. 62	I think Mrs. Cheatham needs to take it down a notch and not be EXTREMELY strict, yell, hit her desk etc.. every day I have the hardest time getting my kid to school because she cries and cries about how much she dislikes her teacher and says her teacher is scary. In our household we do not do the yelling, hollering, slamming stuff, so my daughter isn't used to that toxic atmosphere. Very First day of school she had a student crying in class. Second day of school 2 kids crying in class. And so on. It's still continuing as we speak. When I pick up my daughter from school the first thing she always says when I ask her how her day was at school it's always "not good" Mrs. Cheatham did this and when Mrs. Cheatham was yelling it hurt my ears and she scares me. No child should be "scared" of their teacher. I've spoke to others in and out of the school including other teachers who had even mentioned she's extremely strict. My daughter has always LOVED her school. This year she HATES school and begs me to homeschool her because of how much she hates this one teacher. We don't have meetings about it, we have not expressed any concerns because I will not allow the teacher to mistreat my child or try to fail my child because we choose to speak up. Every teacher in the building besides Cheatham is always loving, cheerful, supportive, I hear teachers and the principal herself telling the kids they love them and hope they have a great day. That's exactly how it should be. The kids should feel safe, loved, and cared for when they are away from home. I don't think cheathams a great fit for quail run elementary kids. Maybe she needs to work with middle schoolers or high schoolers. The only good day my child has is when theirs a substitute teacher. The only time my child doesn't feel scared or frightened is when she's with her other teachers for electives. The only time she feels happy and comfortable is when she's away from Mrs. Cheatham. My child has always been a very good kid, respectful, does as she asked it's the way Mrs. Cheatham is handling other students in the class that has my child scared and not wanting to go to school. It's ridiculous when every day theirs a different child crying in class. I don't know what she is trying to accomplish but yelling, slamming her hand down on the desk is not a environment I want my child to be in every day nor will my child ever think that type of behavior from an adult is ok! Theirs different ways to "discipline" kids who are not doing as asked and if you as a teacher don't have patience, and have reached your limits then call for help. Stop making every other child who is good feel scared by your actions, words, and attitude. School is supposed to be a safe place. I also notice Mrs. Cheathams class is never posted on Facebook much if at all this school year. So you don't get to see much of her class. I see a lot of the same kids posted over and over and over but I don't see many at all of Cheathams classmates. I think someone needs to have a meeting with her and have her work on her anger management skills. I am not the only parent that has a student in her class that feels this way either and what I don't understand is if other teachers are aware of her behavior and she's known to be the "extremely strict one" then why haven't any other teachers spoke up? How do you think the kids feel that have to wake up and walk into that class every day. It's not fair to the kids who do as they are told and never been in trouble all year to feel this way.	1/28/2026 11:53 PM

125	I shouldn't of had to do my own research to find the questions I needed to ask in order for my child to receive accommodations, and I shouldn't have had to fight even harder because of the "data" recorded. My child was sent home as informal suspicions consistently for 2 school years because of his behavior. The "data" recorded didnt help him because of everything being informal. The school failed to implement the IDEA act when he was in first grade to get him the resources he needed which led to continuing of his behavior declining. He earned his way into the gifted program because of his academic excellence only to have him removed from the class room because of his behavior. My son is now in a class he's too advanced for and I had to bring in a doctors note, a note from his therapist, put him on several medications all before the school would even give him a 504 plan. I've had to request an IEP and special education testing. The school dropped the ball completely on my son who's won several awards for his academic excellence because they chose to only view him as a disciplinary issue. No parent or child should have to go through that. There needs to be a way better system in place so parents don't have to fight tooth and nail for things like timers, and cool down breaks.	1/27/2026 6:48 PM

154	My only wish is for students to use textbooks like I did in school. It helps engage them more instead of scrolling, the internet @ home allows students to copy and paste texts from References online. I think more writing should happen. Students should have more projects. I believe the teachers are not fully making sure students are on task. It seems that if a child doesn't understand the material then there should be more effort from teachers. (My opinion) which I hope this is happening already. Thanks	1/27/2026 11:29 AM

384	Overall the school is very good but here are a few suggestions. The lady at the front desk could use some training on creating a welcoming environment and assisting visitors/parents. Do more family events that are free. The amount of money asked for can be overwhelming for parents with multiple children. Strike a balance of paid and free events for the whole family and for students . Publish PTO minutes/briefs for parents who can't attend 4:30 meetings. Don't send busy work for homework. Make it meaningful to the child's needs.	1/23/2026 12:49 PM

441	Overall, I love the school, and I know admin and teachers are doing their best within a system that's stacked against them. I'm so impressed with the creativity and skill the teachers show every time I'm in the school. I'd like to see more admin support for poor student behavior. Admin should be present in the hallways, check in with teachers and remove students who are disruptive to learning. Teachers' jobs are to teach, admins' job is to be sure the school culture supports respect and learning. Research supports more student recess/movement. 20 minutes does not fulfill the need. PBIS is too easy. Not getting ISS is not enough to be rewarded with a celebration. The bar needs to be higher. This will not be a popular opinion, but I am not from here (Georgia), and I think there's an allowance for Christianity here that is not present in other places I've lived. The talent show always features multiple Christian songs, and it's weird to me, because this is a public school. There are students who celebrate Hanukkah and Dawalli, and everything tends to be Santa-heavy in December, even the dress up days. It's even called Santa Shop, not holiday shop. It's a minor gripe, but I find it very weird.	1/22/2026 8:28 PM

444	I feel that this school front office staff can be rude and pushy. The school is very aggressive about fundraising. I had an incident at the Christmas luncheon. The front staffers notified me I could not participate because I didn't purchase a lunch. I don't eat certain things and felt very offended when they insisted I could not simply attend the Christmas program. Then proceeded to tell me I interpret the announcement wrong when it clearly stated "tickets are available for purchase" . I could not believe this school was actually going to turn around a parent simply bc we didn't want to purchase a school lunch. I thought the whole idea of programming was to get parents to be a part of the school activities. I believe they just want money! I was highly upset and after going back and forth they reluctantly said "just go inside then".	1/22/2026 5:56 PM

455	Better communication between parents and teachers. The entire staff at WRHS needs to show more compassion, get to know their students, and have conversations with the students and stop being so judgemental towards the students especially the ones that's having behavioral issues or attendance issues because sometimes it can be something so simple that's causing the attendance issue or behavioral issue. I have witnessed first hand that the staff doesn't care it's only a few that does and I can count them on one hand which is sad.	1/22/2026 2:24 PM

488	The disciplinary issues are overwhelming & out of control! Students should not be given continous opportunities to do better & be better. Now is the time to address the individuals & make sure they understand that poor behavior is not acceptable & will not be tolerated. What goes unaddressed now will lead to bigger issues later. Discipline & respect are not bad words/actions...implement them & see if a difference is made.	1/22/2026 11:33 AM

520	I'd like schools to revert to textbook learning so they're not on the chromebooks as much. It will help them read more & challenge them. The computers allow access to information, so they dont have to work hard or put in effort to validate information. Also, less screen time. Computers serve a purpose because it is less weight & have more data; there should be a balance. Teachers should be more patient with children who may take longer to understand teachings/lessons. It is easy for posts to get lost and/or when thers a post you need more info on theres no option to comment like there was on class Dojo. The option to comment on post help parents get some answers faster than trying to reach out to someone about the post. Class Dojo had parents more engaged and it was easier to Navigate than the new apps.	1/21/2026 1:01 PM

Or make it fun at least these children are in school more than they are at home and learning can become boring to some who need a little bit more than others. What happened to the pizza parties when the children read over a current amount of books. 765	There should be CLEAR communication to parents regarding ASP incidents and how they are handled. Izzy was recently suspended for 5 days from ASP for fighting. Footage had to be reviewed for a decision to be made on a consequence. In the meantime, she was allowed to attend ASP w/ same student she was involved in an altercation with while a decision was being made. On top of that, my husband nor myself was reached out to by ANYONE as a follow-up. It is also dis-heartening to know that my daughter was not spoken to by an administrator at the school regarding the incident. When I spoke to the asst. prin. he did tell me this was his 1st incident of this nature and while I have GRACE for that, I do not appreciate the nonchalant attitude and being cut off because he no long wanted to hear me out. To clarify- I do have and have read the ASP rules/guidelines/procedures, however since I was not allowed to see the video footage- I do not know what constitutes as a "fight". I am not saying my daughter was innocent, but I am saying this was not in her nature. So, seeing the footage would have clarified things.	1/20/2026 12:12 PM

930	I feel that reading is a big part of life. I feel if so whatever class/grade has the highest reading level should be allowed to take a trip to whatever the school can found with some of the parents help. im a 90s mom and some of these children can not read nor tell time nor know the value of money. I know its our job to teach our children but at sometime their single mothers with no village. And also I feel if we should get ride of laptops, it takes away from learning how to spell. :(	1/16/2026 10:10 AM

And she is certainly not creating activities for parents to get involved in. Secondly, the environment is NOT welcoming. I have volunteered on two occasions and both were interesting to say the least (not in a good way). There is definitely a feeling that "you're doing parents a favor" so how dare you even look this way. Lastly, I hope this feedback goes beyond just a read.	1/15/2026 2:45 PM

1034	Students should be able to speak up for themselves! Just because someone is an authoritative figure, doesn't mean a student has to "shut up and listen/do as they say. If an adult addresses a student and the adult is wrong, the student should be able to clarify the situation and respectfully inform the adult they are incorrect in their understanding. Without the student being deemed disrespectful or rude. I feel that Tucker teaches students that it is not ok to defend themselves, which I disagree with. Also, the front office staff can sometimes be rude. I have personally had to address this on more than one occasion. I am sure the school will see this.; Hopefully these comments are taken serious, and no retaliation is bring upon my child or family.	1/15/2026 2:06 PM

I think some of these fundraiser should be for the kids as well. Fundraising for a fun event or grade level fun day with parents or something like that. I'm not saying cut off completely the fundraisers either. I'm just saying use that money for everything not just incentives for teachers.	1/14/2026 9:13 PM

1250	The administration is required to support the Family Liaison by supplying any essential resources to guarantee the child's success. Numerous children are hastily deemed as future statistics, which frequently leads to the administration's failure to intervene. What has become of the principle that no child should be left behind? 1471	I'd like to see more parent involvement overall, NOT in the form of a fundraiser. It's wonderful parents are invited to a holiday lunch with their child, and if you don't want to allow outside food then that's fine. But don't make me pay to come sit with my child at school. Very disappointing.	1/13/2026 7:41 AM

1473	We haven't been getting the school events sheets that use to come home monthly with the events coming up in the school. There have been two different occasions that there were dress up days and we weren't aware until seeing it on Facebook on the day of. I feel like we were better informed of events/activities last year. Also, this is not necessarily an issue about the school but the HCSD app needs a lot of work. I know it's a new thing, but it isn't very user friendly. It would also help if we were able to interact on the posts that the teachers make.	1/13/2026 3:19 AM
