HEMINGWAY HIGH SCHOOL ALUMS INDUCTED INTO HONOR SOCIETY AT NC A&T STATE UNIVERSITY

Two alumni from Hemingway High School's class of 2024, Isaiah Charley and Catherine Wilson, were recently inducted into the Alpha Lambda Delta National Honor Society at North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University (NC A&T). The university has a long-standing tradition of inducting high-achieving first-year students into this honor society, which dates back to at least 1979, during which the chapter held its second induction ceremony.

This year's ceremony took place on April 6, 2025, with the theme "Honoring the New Torch Holders." Alpha Lambda Delta (ALD) is a national honor society that recognizes and encourages academic excellence among first-year students. Many universities conduct annual induction ceremonies to welcome new members who have demonstrated exceptional academic performance during their first year of study.

The ceremony celebrated the students' achievements and inspired them to uphold high academic standards while also encouraging them to take on meaningful roles in society. Membership in ALD provides opportunities for scholarships, leadership development, and community service.
