Building Capacity

Schools host Title I events to build the capacity of parents to help their children at home. A 'link to learning' is embedded in all Title I activities to assist parents with understanding the state's challenging academic standards.

Ways To Be Involved

Communicate: Keep in touch with your child's teacher through telephone, e-mail, and parent-teacher conferences.

Be an example: Show your child that education is important by attending Title I events, reading at home, and showing your child that you support his/her progress in school.

Volunteer: Help at your child's school.

Learn: How to help your child with classwork, homework, and future educational plans.

Get involved: Join and/or participate in School Advisory Council meetings and other school/parent organizations.

Public Law Requires That All Title I Schools:

1. Hold an annual meeting for parents to inform them of the Title I law and how it supports their child's education.

2. Involve parents in developing and/or writing and revising the Parent and Family Engagement Plan and School-Parent Compact.

3. Provide trainings and workshops to build capacity with parents and staff to raise student achievement and encourage active participation of the parents in their child's education.

4. Utilize a percentage of their school's Title I allocation to support a Parent and Family

Council provides input in determining how the Title I funds are used.

Parent & Family Engagement Plans are accessible on school and district websites.

School - Parent Compact

The School-Parent Compact is a written agreement...

Which describes how parents and families, school staff, and students share the responsibility for improved student academic achievement.

Which stresses the importance of frequent communication between school and home.

Which affirms the importance of parents and families in decisions relating to the education of their children.

The compact is to be revised, rewritten, and signed each year by parents and school staff.

Title I

Title I is the largest federal assistance program for our nation's schools. The amount of money received depends on the number of children from low income families enrolled in the district.

These supplemental funds help students meet the state's challenging academic standards by building the capacity of parents and teachers as well as designing programs to help children excel in school and receive the skills they need to be successful. Title I initiatives must be closely aligned with School Improvement Plans.

The goal of Title I is to increase student achievement through:

1. Effective instruction,
2. Professional development, and
3. Parent and Family Engagement

Title I funds are supplemental and may be used to:

- add highly effective teachers and support staff
- support Parent and Family Engagement efforts
- provide staff development
- purchase supplemental instructional resources

Research shows...

When schools, families, and community groups work together to support learning, children tend to perform better in school, stay in school longer, and like school more.

Parent and Family Engagement means the participation of parents in regular, two-way, and meaningful communication involving student academic learning and other school related activities.
