My child frequently mentions that some educators appear petty and condescending. I believe that many teachers and school staff lack genuine passion for their work; if they truly cared, they would make additional efforts to ensure their students comprehend the material presented. Furthermore, it is imperative to cease the assumption that a child will be merely a statistic based solely on their race. Often, parents simply attempt to reach out to assist their child; however, teachers may become offended, perceiving such efforts as personal attacks.
