Purpose: The cafeteria is a place where divisions are consistently drawn. Mix It Up Day encourages students to step outside of their comfort zones and connect with someone new at lunch. Studies have shown that interactions across group lines can reduce prejudices. When students interact with those who are “different” from them, biases and misperceptions can fall away.

How it works: Each student will receive a colored square of paper from their homeroom teacher. During lunch, they will then sit at the table that is labeled with the color of their square. Discussion starter cards will be placed on each table to assist in facilitating conversations between students.

Follow up:

Before the event: Talk with your child(ren) before the event to encourage them to be open to the idea of sitting with someone new, and the importance of being accepting of others' differences.

After the event: Ask your child(ren) something new they learned that day about the child they sat with.
