WILLIAMSBURG COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT'S NICOLE DIXON PARTICIPATES IN LITTLE BLACK DRESS INITIATIVE FOR EIGHTH CONSECUTIVE YEAR

Williamsburg County School District proudly recognizes Nicole Dixon, WCS D Accountant / Procurement, for her continued commitment to raising awareness about women and children living in poverty through her participation in the annual Little Black Dress Initiative hosted by the Junior League of Florence.

Now in her eighth year participating in the initiative, Dixon joins community leaders, educators, and advocates in wearing the same black dress for five consecutive days to symbolize the limited resources and difficult choices many women facing poverty experience daily. The demonstration serves as a powerful awareness campaign designed to spark conversations surrounding economic hardship, food insecurity, housing instability, and access to essential resources.

As a dedicated member and president of the Junior League of Florence, Dixon has consistently used her platform to advocate for social awareness and community engagement while encouraging others to support efforts that uplift families throughout the Pee Dee region.

"The Little Black Dress Initiative is more than wearing the same outfit," said Dixon. "It is about bringing visibility to the realities many women and families face every day and encouraging our communities to respond with compassion, action, and support."

Williamsburg County School District applauds Dixon's ongoing leadership and service, which align with the district's commitment to community involvement, advocacy, and empowering others through meaningful engagement.

The Junior League of Florence's Little Black Dress Initiative continues to raise awareness and support programs that address poverty-related challenges affecting women and children across South Carolina.
