WRITING TASK: Think about the ideas in the two passages, and then write an informational essay in which you explain some of the qualities that make underwater destinations so entertaining.

Paragraph
Numbers

- 1 Places like Jules' Undersea Lodge and Under are appealing underwater destinations! Why? Because you can do things there that you can't do anywhere else!
- 2 When I was a little girl in first grade, I used to love going to the pool. I'd sink down and sit cross-legged on the bottom of the pool. Then, my best friend and I would pretend to have a tea party underwater. Never did I ever imagine that dining underwater would be something that could really happen. However, after reading the Underwater Destination articles I learned that there are amazing places where you can actually eat a meal under the water! In Passage 1 I learned that you eat pizza that is delivered by a scuba diver at Jules'! Or, if you want something fancier, you can ask a "mer-chef" to make you some special food. According to Passage 2, Under has its very own chef named Chef Nicolai. In fact, the chef searches the sea for the ingredients that he will use to cook. When you eat dinner at Under, your seafood meal will have 18 courses of food that can cost up to $400! Underwater pizza, fancy fish, and "mer-chefs"? That's some unique dining!
- 3 Underwater places like Jules' Lodge and Under are also appealing because they are unique destinations. That means that these places are special. These places are not your average weekend vacation site. Passage 2 explains that Under is in Norway, and it is the world's first underwater restaurant in Europe. Amazingly, the builders of this restaurant made it out of concrete so that it could become an underwater muscle reef. The restaurant is 24 feet under the water. It costs a lot of money to eat at Under, so it is a big deal if you get to go there. Also, Passage 1 explained that Jules' Lodge is a hotel that is underwater. The text said, "This is the world's only underwater hotel that is only accessible by scuba-diving." In this unique hotel, visitors can watch fish swim by, watch movies, or play games! These destinations are appealing because they are unique.

Discussion Questions

1. Underline where the writer introduces the topic of the essay. What could be added to the introduction to make it stronger?
2. How is the structure of paragraph 2 different from the structure of paragraphs 3 and 4?
3. Draw a box around any effective transitions and/or transitional phrases used in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4.

4 Finally, underwater destinations are appealing because of the way they were designed to help marine life. When visitors pay to visit these places, I am sure that some of the money goes towards research or helping marine life. Based on the information in Passage 1, Lodge is a large artificial reef that gives shelter and food to marine life. In addition, the oxygen that is pushed into the hotel helps the marine life around the building. Of course, Under is dedicated to helping marine life, too. In fact, "The designers also wanted it to be used as a marine research center" (Passage 2). The text explains that scientists study fish at Under. They learn more about how light and sound can impact fish. And remember, Under was built to become an artificial reef, also. It gives a home to aquatic snails and kelp. By visiting these underwater destinations, you are helping marine life.

5 Jules' Undersea Lodge, Pennekamp Park, or Under would each be great to visit. They are each special. These appealing underwater destinations would be amazing to visit because I'd be helping marine life, I'd get to experience somewhere very unique, and I'd finally get to dine underwater!

4. Highlight the source information reference in paragraph 4. Locate additional evidence from Passage 2 that could be integrated into this paragraph.

5. How does the writer tie the conclusion to the rest of the essay?

TEACHER'S NOTES

1.	See the underlined sentence in paragraph 1. The topic is underwater destinations and why they are appealing. The writer can make the introduction stronger by including the three points introduced in paragraphs 2-4 (dining, unique location, helps marine life).
2.	Paragraph 2 begins with a small moment of elaboration. The writer tells a story of herself as a young girl in a pool. She then ties the elaboration to the idea that these underwater locations are unique because you can dine there. In paragraphs 3 and 4, the writer embeds elaboration within the paragraph.
3.	See the boxed words/phrases in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4. The writer does a good job incorporating transitional phrases within the paragraph—and not just at the beginning of each new paragraph.
4.	See the highlighted sections in paragraph 4. The writer references each source. Additional evidence from Passage 2 can be integrated into this paragraph by adding more specific information about what/how the scientists are studying. Some additional examples that may be used are: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• the scientists study limpets and kelp• special tools to measure and provide data about fish and plant life
5.	The writer restates part of the introduction and then restates each main point. She ends the essay by reminding the reader about her wish to dine underwater as a little girl and the hope that perhaps she will get to do this during the summer vacation.

Underwater destinations can be really fun. There are a lot of places to visit under the water.

One underwater destination is Jules' Undersea Lodge. At this lodge you and your guests are given pizza, but if don't want pizza and want something more fancy you can ask the chef to prepare and serve you a gourmet dish. Underwater destinations can be very entertaining. Lets look at some of the reasons why they can be eye-catching!

For one thing; the fish. Sure some of the fish may look a little boring, but most of the fish are very colorful and beautiful! And sometimes, (depending on where the location of the underwater destination is) you will see manatees! The coral. The coral's colors can be very pretty, and the shapes can be interesting. Also sometimes scientists come to study the fish, coral, or even what the underwater destination does to the environment around

Student Essay #5A: 2022-11-07

Some examples of the qualities that make underwater destinations are so entertaining. They are entertaining because you might see some really cool sea creatures that you have never seen before and you might even see a shark. I get bored of looking at fish swimming by then you can watch a movie or play game of go fish.

Another example of the qualities that make underwater destinations. When you are eating in the restaurant you can watch cool looking fish while you are waiting for your food to come so you will not be bored while you are waiting.

Last example why underwater destinations are entertaining. Because if you are sleeping and you want to sleep in the sun will not shine on your eye also when you are trying to go to sleep it will be quite and peaceful because of the waves.
