Running the risk of embarrassment sophomore Eric Franks allows his mime make-up to be applied by seniors Carmen Roberts and Earl Patton.

eing a teenager means taking some chances. I had the sneaking feeling that Earl had talked me into simply making a fool of myself. But I guess that's part of being a teenager," says Eric Franks.

"Trust me — it won't bitel" exclaims computer teacher Brenda McDonald. McDonald tries to convince her students seniors James Wyatt, Janie Brewer, Rakesh Patel, Michael Wilson, and Eric Angel the computer will not hurt them.

Struggling with the August heat, junior Michele Davis tries to get her English done. Davis says, "The heat combined with Miss James' humor can really make a person sweat."

At the homecoming pep rally, senior majorette Sherri Hall, sophomore majorette Melanie Cunningham, and sophomore flag corps member Stacy Gale kick up some spirit. Hall says, "It has been great having perfect matches to go crazy with. We're all such good triends that it makes making fools of ourselves a lot easier."

Playing in the kazoo band at the homecoming pep rally, seniors Shannon Blalock and Renee Heintz show their senior pride.

Bialock says, "I have senior pride in the Jets and I want to show it and have a great time doing it."

ot so many years ago, many of us were protected from fire by guardians. Playing with matches was a no-no. Some of us may have even had a fascination with fire to the point of experimentation. Senior David Daugherty said, "All kids play with matches. I'm glad someone kept me from burning my house down."

As we readied ourselves to be the generation to usher in the 2000's, we faced the threats of the '80's. These fires burned hotter than we ever imagined as we fiddled with a misplaced lighter in our backyards. AIDS was an epidemic that forced us to confront social behaviors never tested before. "AIDS is a life-threatening disease that will haunt us for the rest of our lives," said senior Philip Wyatt.

Another threat was teenage pregnancy. Senior Gretchen Holman said, "Many people are failing to learn when to say 'no' and are failing to accept available practices to save them from having to deal with the problems of teenage pregnancy."

The infernos flaring around us were not all sexually related. Drugs, no longer confined to a few types and strengths, seemed more available than ever. Senior Diane Westerfield said, "I can't believe that teenagers continue to use drugs even though they can see the dangerous and sometimes fatal effects of the substances."

FFA seniors Ricky Bayless, Larry Dearmon, Tony Davis, and Chad Spicer take many aspects of life seriously, such as loading grills for a chicken barbeque. Spicer says, "Being irresponsible can cause a lot of unnecessary trouble. I strive to be the kind of person that does his part in making a project a success."

Going through the lunch line, senior Donna Austin fills up her glass with some punch. "Besides a time for me to get my afternoon meal, lunch is also a time for me to catch up with my friends about what's happening in their lives," says Austin.

hoosing friends was a decision we were forced to make every-day. Many of us did not take this choice lightly, because we might have been burned by friends. Senior Vicki Blaylock said, "Some people choose friends for the wrong reasons. I choose my friends by their personality and what kind of person they are on the inside."

We might have wished we had played with a different box of matches when we thought of our dating choices. Yet some might have found a love that they were convinced would last a lifetime. Senior Angela Roysdon said, "Love can be compared to fire. Some fires eventually burn out, but everyone is always searching for an eternal flame."

Was there any warmer spirit than that of Jet pride? Senior Amy Campbell said, "We saw our teams suffer defeat at times, but when the victory did come, the school spirit burned brighter than ever."

We gained pride in our city as Crossville progressed to greater industrialization with new factories and businesses such as Aristokraft and Vanity Fair. As this progression occurred, we were faced with threats that were often felt as change takes place. Senior Kim Reagan said, "I don't like change. I feel safer knowing that everything is going to stay the same."

On their way to the homecoming parade, junior Julie Emery, seniors Ted Monday, and Jason Atkinson laugh and enjoy themselves. Monday says, "I enjoy going to social events. That's a perfect place for being matched up with someone."

Cheering in the rain the varsity cheerleaders juniors Missy Bernabei, Marcia Wisdom, senior Heather Bialock, Juniors Suzanne Breeding, Sherry Pugh, Vickie Benischek, and Robin McMahon show that rain does not dampen their school spirit. Bernabel says, "The spirit was high even though our hair fell."

Eating his way to victory senior Jeff Gayhart blazes past his competitors sophomore David Newberry and junior John Noland in the homecoming annual pie-eating contest. Gayhart says, "Where's the bottom of this thing?"

Keeping the pencil hot seniors Carles Ferreiro (foreign exchange student from Spain), Henrik Bengtsson (foreign exchange student from Sweden), Joe Lowe, and Cyndi Akins check out books for their traditional English class book report. Ferreiro says, "I have been around these people who can't spell my name for so long that I am starting to have trouble with it myself."

Working on the drama club float, senior George Popovich and junior Ben Smith attach the curtains. Popovich says, "Working on the drama float was a really great way to express my artistic views. It also telt good to be a part in the making of the very first club float (even though it wasn't used in the parade and was massacred by the vengeful rain)."

he generations before had weathered their social problems and many of us were ready to do the same. Senior Tracie Cox said, "Sometimes we don't think that our parents' problems were as difficult as ours are now, but the problems were tough and our parents survived. Now it is our turn to do the same as we face the problems of the '80's. We must fight and overcome the burning issues around us." In order to survive these issues, we had to make some decisions. Senior Heather Loveday said, "I wish sometimes that I was a little girl again, because the pressure of the choices in my life wasn't all on me."

Perhaps there was no perfect world accessible to us. Sophomore Fredda Weaver said, "I want to see our generation enthusiastically challenge and deal with the problems and issues around us so that we can be the generation to help make this a more perfect world."

Working on a Biology II lab assignment, juniors Ryan Doyle, Kristle Farmer, and Craig Green look through the microscope. Farmer says, "During Ms. Shaffer's lab there's no telling what you can come up with!"

Awaiting the beauty contest are Tom Reed, Andy Bass, Chad Cunningham, Cam Stinnett, Philip Wyatt, Pat Randall, Jon Hall, and Chris Zimmerman.

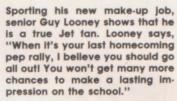

Standing out in the crowd, senior Rocky Davis displays his inflatable jet.

At the homecoming pep rally, Jet seniors cheer their way to a victory for their last football homecoming. Senior Jennifer Gayhart says, "We worked hard all week to make our last homecoming special. The seniors all pulled together to help bring a blazing victory." Teaching Sandra Elmore, art teacher Jane Armes explains two point perspective. Armes says, "Students who are going for the honors diploma are sometimes taking a risk of lowering their G.P.A. because they need a credit in performing arts."

Trying to rekindle the homecoming flame in the "Don't Rain On My Parade" parade, sophomore football players Randy Lewis, Henry Sedgebeer, Jonathan Alderman, Robbie Clarke, J.J. Walker, and Jeff Jones get fired up for the game. Sedgebeer says, "The parade was wild. It got the team and the fans really pumped up."

Luck was not with the students at the homecoming parade. The rain drenched everyone in sight. Math and Spanish teacher Jim Dunigan said, "There was some disappointment, but the students of CCHS have known enough disappointment in life to have become resilient enough to handle such things in stride."

Not everything was in the mud. Senior Ritchie Fields said, "To make up for the loss of the parade we were allowed to have a second pep rally. It raised a few spirits even though the weather was foul." Junior football player Cliff Harber said, "Obviously the rain didn't dampen the flames of JET pride because we won the game anyway!"

The parade was set for a later date and was dubbed the "Don't Rain On My Parade" parade. Sophomore Sirena Kirk said, "The sun was out and it was warm. What more could we ask for?!"

Students were allowed to walk to Main Street at 12:30 p.m. to watch the parade. Sophomore Brian Hall said, "I was lucky. Riding a horse in the parade was better than walking to town. We had just as much fun being in the parade as everyone else did watching it."

Junior Lee Huettner said, "In the end, it all turned out O.K."

Happy that the rain did not spoil the parade for the second week in a row, the senior football players were pleased to take part in their final football homecoming parade. Senior football player Tony Sherrill says, "The parade was really special because it's our senior year. I'm just glad this one didn't get rained out."

In the homecoming parade, seniors Steve Hurd and other basketball team members assure Jet fans that they're not just a bunch of weenles. "The glamourous life is very demanding and carries many responsibilities, one of which is having to ride in the back of a 4 x 4 truck in the infamous homecoming parade acknowledging my loving fans," says Hurd.

Marching in the "Don't Rain On My Parade" parade, senior band members Beth Little and Billy Ayers grit their teeth hoping the sun will continue. Little says, "It was kind of depressing because our homecoming parade got rained out, but it was good we got to have a make-up parade."

Wearing shades to block out the sun junior Cristy Anderson and senior Janel Hinch ride Hinch's horse Red in the parade. Hinch says, "i've had fun riding my horses in the homecoming parades. This was the best parade.

After being crowned homecoming queen, junior Missy Peek and junior escort Chris Zimmerman stay dry under an umbrella. "It was a privilege to be chosen as queen. I was more than ready to get out of the rain and go the dance to celebrate," says Peek.

Escorted by senior Ross Sickmiller, band sweetheart senior Donna Johnson is crowned by band captain senior Mike Young. Johnson says, "I was ecstatic when I was chosen band sweetheart. This honor was the acme of my senior year."

Rain Persists

Concluding a big week of activities throughout the school, homecoming day was finally here. Many activities kept students busy from the start of the day to the very last dance.

Pregame activities included the pinning on of colors for the senior football players and senior cheerleaders. Senior football player Tom Reed said, "Hopefully, I will look back someday and say," I really had fun." That's what it's all about. Homecoming just made it better."

"The rain at the home-coming game was a little depressing. It was hard for the band to perform while totally soaking wet," said drum major senior Steve Tabor.

Halftime was busy with the pinning on of colors for the senior bandmembers. Sophomore band member Denise Wood said, "The sophomore girls in band make the colors for the seniors every year. This year, I had the honor of making them. It was a lot of hard work, but I had fun."

Head football coach Dennis Webb said, "The effort at the homecoming game was one of the better efforts of the year. The kids played together with a purpose. It was one of our highlights for the year."

Blazing onto the field, seniors Chad Cunningham, Andy Bass, Tony Davis, Scott VanWinkle, Philip Wyatt, and Mark Hyder burst through the spirit poster.

Waiting to pin on colors, senior Jay Meadows and sophomore Regina Gilbert try to keep fired up for homecoming even in the rain. Meadows says, "it's hard to start a fire on a rainy night."

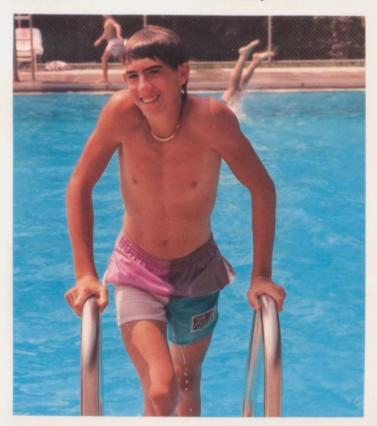

Waiting in the rain, juniors Lainie Shanks and LaDonda Proffitt prepare for homecoming. Shanks says, "The rain does wonders for my hair."

Got a Match?

Cooling off at the State Park's new olympic-size pool, junior Darian Dykes says, "The pool was great because the heat was unbearable." Kroger's employee sophomore Luther Treadway rolls a grocery cart into the store. Treadway says, "It's hard work, but I like to make money."

Summer Sizzles

Working in the summer was a reality for many students. "I worked to save money for college and a car," said junior Jamey Kindrick. "I worked one day a week so no one would say I was lazy," said junior Wade Stover. Krista Kerley said, "I worked at K-Mart as a cashier. I didn't have much free time, but when I did, I worked on my tan."

Leisure time was spent mostly at the pool, keeping old friendships alive and making new ones. "I spent my days laying by the pool perfecting my tan and my nights in town perfecting my conversation," said sophomore Amy Kearley.

Going to camp seemed to be a popular way of spending summer time. Sophomore Shawn Cox said, "I went to camp because it was a free trip to Florida. I went to the beach and built sand castles." Junior Aaron Edmonds said, "I went to band camp to bother Mr. Tinnel. I had an all right time while standing in the sun scorching and sweating."

Preparation for the tough sports seasons ahead started early for most athletes. "I lifted weights and played softball over the summer so that I could stay in shape and be prepared for the sports I play in school," said sophomore Amy Wilson. Harvill said, "Summer football practice was mostly made up of lifting weights and becoming stronger, and was arranged in a way where everyone could come at least twice a week."

Preparing to leave yearbook camp seniors Melanie Locke, India Brown, Becky Burgess, and Crystal Couch discuss what they have accomplished. Brown says, "Discovering that our yearbook had what it takes to be an All American book and coming up with our hot theme 'Playing with Matches' made it well worth the scorching weather."

Preparing the gym for the first dance of the year, senior student council member Tracle Cox says, "I enjoy preparing this institution for the training of young impressionable minds. I feel that with a clean school the environment is conductive to the learning of world events."

Enjoying handling all the cash flow during the summer at the state park swimming pool, senior David Moore says, "The only thing I didn't like about my summer job was my clown shorts."

Waiting at her heated post, senior Kristie Smith tells senior Carolyn Jones the rules of the pool. Smith says, "Lifeguarding can be a tough job and even best friends need to be reprimanded."

Enjoying their meal at the food relay during football homecoming are junior Bobby Gilbert and sophomore Chris Guldara. Guldara says, "I like the high school pep rallies much more than those at Martin because of all the different activities we do, like the consumption of beenle weenles." Rapping "Boom-Chicka-Boom" at a pep rally, Junior Chad Pugh, seniors Guy Looney and Cam Stinnett, and Junior Chris Zimmerman show the crowd that they have soul. Stinnett says, "Me and my homeboys felt real privileged to be able to perform in front of such a great group of fans like the ones at this school."

Leading the snake dance is junior Rick Whisnant and followers seniors Cam Stinnett, Scott Vanwinkle, Trina Hamby, Jeff Gayhart, Philip Wyatt, and Andy Bass. Whisnant says, "The snake dance brings the sophomores, Juniors, and seniors together. It helps if everybody gets into the action."

Performing live at the pep rally, seniors Jeff Gayhart and Ted Monday bring a spark of life to the school spirit. Gayhart says, "The idea of being a senior excites us, and we want every senior to be as excited as we are."

Here Come 'The Firemen'

Something new was added to the pep rallies — school spirit — Boom-Chica-Boom style! "This cheer was used at every pep rally and we felt like the crowd was fired up!" said junior cheerleader Robin McMahon.

Senior "firemen" Jeff Gayhart and Ted Monday quickly took it upon themselves to get crowds fired up with lots of spirit and unpredictable humor. Drivers' education teacher and cheerleading sponsor Blanche Webb said, "I never knew what to expect or what they would do next."

Enjoying the spirit of a pep rally, the seniors try something new. Senior Trina Hamby says, "We wanted to do something different. The 'crew' came up with gatoring. It was a real crowd pleaser." Monday said, "We wanted to show our spirit in a unique way and we did."

The cheerleaders, with the help of Webb, tried many different things to bring the students to their feet. Sophomore cheerleader Becky D'Armond said, "A real crowd pleaser was 'the 12 Years of School,' or when the football players held a Fashion Show."

Many students felt the pep rallies had improved. "We just want to try and promote school spirit everytime we go out on the floor. Hopefully, the cheerleaders and the student body will get better everytime," said senior cheerleader Gladys Maddux.

Sitting in study hall, sophomore Michael Hennessee and Lynn Eddington enjoy a quick morning snack. Eddington says, "I don't usually eat candy, but sometimes I do just to keep my mind on school."

Assorted Sales Benefit Clubs and School

Selling candy bars, selling ads for the yearbook, working in a concession stand, selling newspapers, having activities and running a bookstore were all ways that clubs and organizations made money for the benefit of their clubs and sometimes the school.

Many teachers considered selling candy bars as the most popular way to get that much needed computer, VCR or various other classroom aides, but did not enjoy the task. "Even though I dislike selling candy bars in school because of all the negative outcomes, the reality is that we made $1,600 in nine days to purchase a computer for the classroom. I wonder if the Japanese have to do this, " said economics teacher Teresa Sher-

Clubs also sold candy as a way to raise money for various events throughout the year. "The candy sale produces the funds necessary to complete the literary magazine. Money is essential, but so is the input we get from the students," said president of Writers Guild, April Carr.

However, not everyone loved the idea of selling candy bars or anything else. "I can't believe that there is no other way to make money besides selling candy bars and imposing on every person in Cumberland County," said senior Brian Houston.

Picking out which ads to sell, seniors India Brown and Cindy Pugh realize the tough task ahead of selling ads. "No one realizes how much money it takes to put an annual together. A lot of our time at the beginning of the year is spent selling ads and raising money so we can make the best annual possible," says Brown.

18 Money-Makers

Selling candy bars for the band, sophomore Robin White sells one to Kelly Crews. "Even though it was a hassle, I enjoyed selling candy because I knew the band could use the money," says White.

Selling the homecoming editon of the "Jet Contrall," publication members junior Robin McMahon, senior Jennifer Gayhart and junior Pedja Novakovich are assaulted by senior Jason Atkinson. "I never really knew all the hard work that goes into making a paper. I was disappointed because more people did not buy one. The publications staff never makes money off the paper, we just break even," says Novakovich.

Pricing Items for the FFA food booth at the fair are junior Rhonda Adams, senior Tammy Adams, junior Telessa Williams, and senior Palla Hassler. Hassler says, "Helping with the booth was a good way to get involved with FFA and raise money for the club." Coach Landreth collects $2.00 P.E. fee from senior Ted Pelfrey. Landreth says, "Just because you're a senior doesn't mean you can buy your way out of P.E."

While senior Earl Patton steps out to get a picture, juniors Anjanette Conley, Jody Hughes, Ryan Doyle, and Aaron Edmonds, and freshman Brian Adams urge him on. Doyle says, "When school is out, we all get crazy, drugs or not."

After cheerleading practice, senior Gladys Maddux relaxes in the sun. Maddux says, "Using drugs is a personal choice. Here, drugs are all around, so it's easier for people to start."

Walking in the snow, senior Mike Staggs wonders if it will last long. Staggs says, "Seeing all the snow reminded me of the drugs (cocaine) that are in the world, but unlike snow, drugs can't melt away."

During play practice, sophomore Kristy Kirkland asks about the alto line in "Freddy My Love." Kirkland says, "Drugs don't make you cool, just stupid. I do my own thing."

20 Just Say No

Making himself dizzy during basketball homecoming festivities, junior Jake Turner gets crazy for his class. Turner says, "Even though this picture looks like I'm on drugs, it doesn't take drugs for someone to do something wild and crazy."

Trying on the perfect pair of shades in English class, senior Lonnie Norrod says, "I've found that the natural glow and power of my own personality are better than drugs. As you can see, I often am forced to wear shades to protect myself from the brightness of my own aura."

Survey Defines Drug Scene

In the headlines of many newspapers and magazines were catch-phrases and poetic lines concerning the nation's and state's drug problem. As President Reagan was in the midst of leaving office, his $2.5 billion "National War on Drugs" was in full swing. Still though, according to a June, 1988, issue of U.S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT, Americans spent over $140 billion on drugs in 1988.

Newly installed governor Ned Rae McWherter initiated his own program, "Drug Free Tennessee." In accordance with this program, Nathan Ingram became the Drug Alliance Coordinator in Cumberland County and the Teens Against Drugs Club was formed.

"I think TAD has had a serious effect on the drug scene in Cumberland County. We're saying that it's all right not to do drugs. You can still be cool," said club

Reading of the rise in teenage drug use, senior Lori Underwood wonders what makes people start. Underwood says, "I think peer pressure is a sorry excuse for using drugs and alcohol. It's crazy to risk so much." president senior Whitney Dodson.

With all of this war waging on drugs, a May, 1988, issue of Scholastic Update contained a University of Michigan Survey stating that 86 percent of U.S. high school seniors said it would be easy to get marijuana. "It seems like drugs are everywhere—in school, in town, everywhere. I worry about my little brother more than anything else," said junior Jody Hughes.

In a local survey given by TAD, students gave their opinions as to the local drug scene. Although only 67 percent of students believed there was a drug problem at CCHS, 42 percent use tobacco, 49 percent use alcohol, 20 percent use marijuana, and 16 percent have tried cocaine in some form.

"I can only hope that our efforts will pay off in the future. TAD will be around as long as drugs are," said Ingram.

Marching Band season was the time the public got a chance to see the talent in the band. "The band is full of talented people and when you bring them all together something exciting happens," said senior Mark Conaster.

The band's music varied. The selections they played were, "A Night on Bald Mountain," "Since I Fell For You," "St. Thomas," "How Do You Keep The Music Playing," and "Play Your Own Kind of Music."

Much time was spent on the field show and music before school started. "Learning all the right moves and steps was difficult since the flag corps had to compose a lot of the routine themselves," said junior flag corps co-captain Pam Trotter.

Rookie Week was held for the new members and band camp followed. "The discipline we learned in practice was necessary to do a good job in the shows and competitions," said sophomore Jenny Axford.

Having her colors pinned on, senior band member Melanie Locke and her escort junior Scott Looney stand through a wet homecoming. "Even though it was rainy and misty out, it was homecoming for us seniors. I was going to make the best out of it, no matter what!" says Locke.

The band performed in the Liberty Bowl. "Being invited to the Liberty Bowl was a great honor, but winning first place in the pregame competition was great!" said senior Marlin Trotter. "The Liberty Bowl was a great trip, except for the subzero weather. Maybe we will be involved in the Sugar Bowl next year, which is indoors," said senior Bart Purcell.

They also hosted their own marching festival, called the Upper Cumberland Marching Festival.

A Bradley Classic, a contest held at Bradley County High School, was favorable this year. The drumline received a superior rating and first place in their division. Band received fourth place overall.

Playing in the stands, seniors Christina Davis and Linda Barnes enjoy their last marching season. "Playing in the stands was a way to show our school spirit," says Barnes.

Raising the spirit level in the stands, senior Jerry Pugh plays the "Jet Fight Song." Pugh says, "When we scored a touchdown, it was really an honor to stand up and show how much we appreciate our team by playing the 'Jet Fight Song.' "

For the first time in the history of the music department, one student makes All State two years and another makes it for three years in a row. Junior Julie Emery for chorus wins for her second year as Soprano I and senior Mike Young for band wins for his third year. Other All State delegates are junior Brucene Wyatt, Alto I and senior April Carr, Alto II. During the homecoming activities sophomore Fredda Weaver pins on senior band member Mike Young's colors. Young says, "Even though the weather was horrible, I felt that this moment symbolized a great step towards graduation, and a new exciting tuture."

Waiting for halftime, flag corps seniors Connie Seiber, Tracie Dial, majorettes senior Sherri Hall, and sophomore Melanie Cunningham spark up the spirit in the stands. Hall says, "Nobody realizes how cold it can get when your sitting up in the stands with your uniform on. So dancing in the stands is not only fun, but it helps keep you warm, too"

Grueling Memories Cherished

For many students, their high school years were filled with memories of long practices, difficult routines, and thrilling performances. These memories were of being in band. Not only did band furnish memories but also a learning experience for many.

Senior drum major Steve Tabor said, "I've been in the band since the sixth grade and the lessons I've learned are priceless. Not only is band getting together, making music, and having fun, but it teaches one responsibility, the meaning of dedication, and pride in a job well done."

Senior member and band captain Mike Young said,

"Band is a great opportunity for a person to grow and develop. Contrary to popular belief, it takes a lot of work to be good at it. Leadership, dedication, school spirit, and self-gratification are just a few of the rewards to be found. Not only does one learn about music in band, but about himself."

"Band has been a great experience for the last seven years because of the things I have learned and because of the great people I have met and have become friends with. I will always remember band and what it has taught me," said senior member Denton Brock.

Practicing in exile in the parking lot, the band suffers the August heat. Sophomore Sean Turner says, "it's really hot out here. You can see the heat rising from the pavement. I think I just broke my back on this horn-pop."

Some in plastic ponchos, some without, the flutes brave the rain at homecoming. Senior flutist Nancy Marshall says, "Being in the band has been a wonderful experience. I will never forget nor will I miss all the trips to away games and playing in the rain at homecoming. That has to be the most memorable of all."

Playing through the drum break at the pep rally, drum line members, senior Rob Sickmiller, junior Aaron Edmonds, sophomore Jason Young, and senior Bart Purcell show off for the student body. Edmonds says, "At the pep rallies I like to make as much noise as one person can possibly make."

Jamming out during the pep rally, the bass drums set the rhythm for a fun-filled activity period. Junior Kelly Pugh says, "All the people in the drum line really make band exciting." Moving into formation, the flag corps perform during the pregame show. Flag corps member sophomore Holli Herren says, "Being a member of the flag corps is a lot of hard work, but seeing the crowd involvement before the game makes it worthwhile."

Select Players Jazz It Up

To broaden their horizons some marching/concert band members joined the Jazz Band. "I like jazz band because we get away from the marching and the classical oriented music that we play regularly," said sophomore Robin White.

"The jazz band is important to me because it introduced me to a different style of playing my saxophone," said sophomore member Denise Wood.

Just like concert band, the jazz band members had a chance to play with the some of the best players in East Tennessee, and it gave them an opportunity to meet with other players from all over the state.

The Jazz Clinic took place at Notre Dame where they tried out for the three different bands. Wood said, "Try outs were murder! As a saxophone player there is a lot of competition. They only pick two alto saxophones, two tenor saxophones, and one baritone saxophone for each of the three bands. It was difficult but I enjoyed it very much."

Senior Donna Johnson said, "This is my last year in the band and jazz band and I will miss both of them very much in the years to come."

New jazz band member senior Marlin Trotter helps out sophomore Scott Campbell fulfill the part of the rhythm section. Trotter says, "This is my first year in jazz band and I enjoy it very much."

Taking a break from the pressure of Jazz band, Junior Julie Emery shows her talent on the plano. Emery says, "I never played anything but classical music on the plano until I Joined the Jazz band. Now I play Jazz more than anything else."

Helping out the saxophone section, new members sophomores Jason Burton and Denise Wood jazz things up. Wood says, "I really enjoy jazz band because it always puts me in a good mood and relieves my stress."

Practicing with the trombones, senior Denton Brock blows his own horn. Brock says, "I enjoy jazz band because it lets me do more things than regular band." Preparing for their next gig, seniors Jason Wilson, Ross Sickmiller, and junior Matt Cowart warm up. Cowart says, "Jazz band is a great experience and is also very challenging. I have a great time."

Resting from setting up for the activity, senior student council members David Bilbrey, Ronnie Baylosis, Andy Bass, and Scott Vanwinkle relax and enjoy the activity. Bilbrey says, "We're in charge of the audio sometimes, but we get front seats."

Working on a new project, senior student council member Vicki Blaylock thinks about some ideas to discuss with the council. Blaylock says, "Student council is a lot of hard work, but everyone pulls their own weight to get things accomplished."

Council Provides Variety

"Student Council provides a lot of opportunities for the students. They learn responsibility, but they still have fun," said student council sponsor Flory Dunigan. Since 1977, student coun-

Since 1977, student council had remained one of the only ones in the state to function as a class. During this class time, student council worked on various activities for school and special projects for the community.

Student council's first activity of the year was the Welcome Back dance soon followed by Friday activities ranging from academic bowls to the "legs" contest. "I enjoy the Friday activity, because it gives me a chance to see friends that I normally don't get to see," said junior Kristie Farmer.

Football homecoming arrived and everywhere anyone looked was a student council member begging for spirit link money, getting students involved in class activities and doing the millions of other things which homecoming involved.

With the presidential election soon to be under way, student council held a mock election for the students and faculty. "The mock election gave the students a chance to voice their political opinion," said junior student council member Buzz Hamby.

"Student council has opened a lot of doors and has given me many chances to meet new people," said junior student council member Missy Peek. "I'm glad to be a part of it!"

Updating senior student council member David Bilbrey and student council president Cam Stinnett on Intramural sports, student council advisor Flory Dunigan gives them scores. Stinnett says, "Although student council is usually an open forum some one-on-one conferences are required."

Dishing out beans at the teacher barbecue, student council members junior Charleen Smith and senior Crystal Couch serve the teachers. Smith says, "Working at the barbecue gave me a chance to show my appreciation to the teachers."

Watching student council members junior Chad Pugh and sophomore Jessica Gayhart decorate for the first dance of the year, junior Nick Harris says, "I enjoy watching other people work while relaxing with my Sprite."

During the ple eating contest senior Ted Monday shows his true colors. Monday says, "I enjoy being in the ple eating contest because it lets me show off my true talents of eating fast and eating messy."

Returning for the third year in the talent show, the Heebie-Jeebies go a little outrageous. "We'd like to send out a special thanks to our loyal fans. Our future plans are to move to New York and sign a recording contract with Atlantic Records,"says Steve Hurd.

Most Embarrassing Moments

"My most embarrassing moment was when Wade Stover and Craig Green pushed me into the boys' bathroom with a coach in there." — junior Trina Hinch

"When Ted Monday sang 'You've Lost That Loving Feeling' to me in the lunchroom which was full of people." — senior Joe Lowe

"The time I was walking into the gym and up the stairs and I missed a step and fell. I felt like a small microscopic piece of dirt and my face was as red as a beet because I knew that everyone was looking at me." — senior Lori Underwood

"The time my best friend accidentally knocked my purse in the toilet of the girls' bathroom. I was afraid that everyone would smell my purse." — senior Allison Barnwell

Strutting their stuff to a new Levi's commercial, seniors Ronnie Baylosis, David Bilbrey, Philip Wyatt, Andy Bass and Scott VanWinkle bring a cheer from the crowd.

Drama class takes a break. "The CRP (creative rest position) is an excellent way for the drama class to relax and concentrate at the beginning or end of class," says drama teacher Marilouise Michel.

During an assignment in English class seniors Jeanine Girardi, Jan Kearley, Larissa Richards, Wendy Mullen, Regina Selby, and David Daugherty portray the characters in "The Canterbury Tales." Daugherty says, "I just hate it when I have to portray some dude from the 15th century. Back then they dressed weird, talked weird, and who knows what else they did weird."

Gong show contestant senior Ted Monday enhances his performance by dancing with senior Mark Hyder. Hyder says, "Ted and I had had dance lessons all summer and finally got to show off our stuff."

After placing in the top five of the Beauty Contest, senior Felicia Wyatt (alias Philip Wyatt) decides to bare it all. Wyatt says, "It really hurt when Mark Hyder said I looked cheap."

Singing "Always" junior Julie Emery and senior Earl Patton perform together. Emery says, "Singing with Earl was great. He has a wonderful voice."

Singing 'The Day My Baby Died,' senior Jeff Gayhart wins first place.

Dancing in the talent show sophomore Melody Allen says, "I was really scared at first, but when the music started it wasn't that bad."

Talent Judged 'Hot'

Taking first place in the 1989 Talent Show senior Jeff Gayhart was said by many to be "hot." Senior Missy Norris said, "The song was hilarious, the act was hot. Jeff can really sing those high notes."

Gayhart felt that it was an honor to win first place. He said, "The Day My Baby Died" was a song that has given my life motion and meaning and inspired me to great heights. The money from first prize will help put gas in my Nova and pizza in my stomach."

Second place was won by junior Julie Emery and senior Earl Patton who sang a duet. Also, Patton participated in the group, "Point Blank," that took third place. Also in the group "Point Blank" were seniors Mark Steinman, Steve Tabor, and Mike Turner.

Patton said, "Doing two things in the Talent Show really put a lot of pressure on me but it was worth it because singing with Julie is always a lot of fun and playing with the guys is incomparable."

One of the judges of the Talent Show was Crossville Chronicle Photographer Amy Hall. Hall said, "I helped pick Jeff for first place because his overall performance was fantastic. We had a certain criteria to follow including crowd reaction, talent, and time spent in preparation."

Sophomore Valorie Farr said, "This Talent Show was too hot to handle!!!"

"The song 'Johnny Be Good' brings out the bad in me," says English teacher Linda Williamson. She dances with Junior Chris Zimmerman (Cheech) at the talent show.

Singing "Love Potion #9" to a stadium full of fans is the "Big Laguna and the Waves." Lead singer Benji Louchart says, "I was in the show for my adoring fans (GIRLS)."

Placing third, "Point Blank" keyboard player senior Mike Turner says, "I just wanted to make some noise. I wanted to win in the students' eyes and by their reaction I think we did okay." Singing in the talent show, juniors Erin Carney and Julia Payne share a common bond. Payne says, "The song 'Undivided' has a special meaning to Erin and me because our religious beliefs are different. The song exemplifies our friendship."

Displaying her spirit sophomore Jenny Axford participates in the Talent Show. Axford says, "The talent show was a good way for me to gain stage experience for a musical career."

After hearing the referee's call, the Lady Jets show their disappointment. Coach Sherrill says, "Hey Refl Can't you see anything?"

Carrying the ball down the court on a fast break, senior Scott Van-Winkle goes for two. VanWinkle says, "Taking care of the ball is an important part of the homecoming game."

Seniors Win With 'Top Gun'

"Jets Are Top Gun" was the theme that the senior class used to win all but one activity in basketball homecomina.

Senior Mika Proffitt said, "I think that it's great that the seniors won basketball homecoming because it was our last chance."

All three classes participated in activities such as class competition, banner contest, pep rally, class participation, and canned food drive.

Junior student council member Marcia Wisdom said, "All of the different activities are great because they get the student body involved in the homecoming spirit."

Homecoming ended in the traditional crowning of the king and queen. During the intermission between the girls' and boys' game, sophomore Bryant Henry was crowned as king and junior Anjanette Conley was crowned queen.

Along with the cheerleading squad, sophomore Becky D'Armond tries to arouse the crowd. D'Armond says, "We've tried to work more with crowd involvement. It's more fun to cheer when the crowd cheers with you."

Leading the Jets with 22 points, junior Rick Hayes tips off against a Trojan player. "We all wanted to win the game and we proved it on the floor."

Assistant coach Jimmy Inman and head coach Teresa Sherrill discuss the attitude of the five starting seniors before the game. Sherrill says, "I think our team is ready to win this game for the seniors."

Leading the Lady Jets in scoring during the homecoming game, senior Jennifer Gayhart runs down a loose ball. Gayhart says, "We were all a little nervous because Michelle was sick and she usually leads us in scoring, but the seniors pulled together for a nice win!"

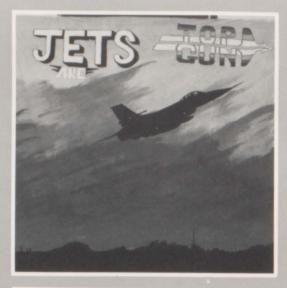

Basketball homecoming king Bryant Henry is presented with his award by basketball captain Shannon Blaylock. "I would like to thank everyone that participated in the homecoming of '89 to make it happen. I would also like to thank the basketball girls for electing me as a king for homecoming '89," says Henry. Also Bryan Krabousanos and Rick Hayes crown junior Anjanette Conley homecoming queen.

Shooting for two in the homecoming game, Terry Christopher aims for the perfect shot. "Being my birthday and homecoming it made shooting seem a lot easier," says Christopher.

Bouncing toward victory, sophomores Steve Smith and Andy Myhr win the new cucumber competition. Smith says, "Nothing gets girls more jealous than passing a cucumber to Andy Myhr."

For the third year, seniors take first place in the banner contest. Artist Mike Turner says, "Every year they lock me in a room with a sheet and some paint and say 'do something!' So I do and then 'The Crew' always comes in to help finish it. It always has been a lot of fun and the judges seem to like them too."

Juniors work their way up to second place. Artist Sheila Dial says, "At least we did better than last year, but maybe next year we'll plan ahead and win first."

In their first year, sophomores take a respectable third place. One of many artists on the banner, sophomore Jennifer Bass says, "I really enjoyed working on the banner, but I wish that more sophomores had helped."

Trying to get his tennis ball to land in the jar, senior Jamie Atkinson participates in class competitions. Atkinson says, "I felt dumb because I had to do the hard competition, the one with the tennis ball between my legs and under my chin. Then I felt dumber when I dropped the one under my chin because it was the easiest."

Racing against time to try to capture first place, juniors Michelle Davis and Marcia Wisdom try not to drop their class' lifesaver. Wisdom says, "I am glad that I got to keep the toothpick."

Competitions Bring New Spirit

As the school year started, the school spirit and Jet pride grew. There were more students involved in pep rallies and class competition than ever before.

Cheerleading and sophomore class sponsor Blanche Webb said, "I think class competition is great. It really gets the students involved, and gets them fired up for the pep rally and homecoming.

Senior student council president Cam Stinnett said, 'Our main goal was to increase student pride in the school and community. This year I think we accomplished that."

Some students and teachers thought that class competition was good for other reasons. Student council advisor Flory Dunigan said, "I think that class competition is good because if students have school spirit, then their grades tend to be higher."

Senior Jimmie Keck said, "I feel that class competition helps bring the people in the stands down from talking and being bored and gives them something better to do, like getting involved with their class."

Inevitable Matches Sharing Genes

Many of the students that attended the high school were children of the teachers.

Having one of your parents at school with you was not as bad as it had seemed for students Jay Meadows, Criss Woods, and Jason Burton. "I get along with my mom at home — I should get along with her at school," said senior Jay Meadows. "With your parent at school, you have connections. I know things ahead of time," said junior Criss Woods. "It's nice to know if I've forgotten something that I can go to my mom and ask her for it whether it's money or an excuse," said sophomore Jason Burton.

Having one of your parents at school could be bad too, especially for sophomore Sharmain Vanwinkle. "Knowing that my dad is at school, I try harder to be good. If I do the slightest thing my dad will find out!" said Vanwinkle.

Many of the embarrassing moments were told by the students. "An embarrassing moment was when my mom tried to shoot basketball last year," said junior Joey Parris. English teacher Richard Fields told of an embarrassing moment with stepdaughter Julie Emery. "I remember the time she put oatmeal in my shoes and it rained. I often have to remind her not to wear my shoes to school!"

Sitting in his room with daughter Michelle Freeman is building trades teacher Roscoe Freeman. Freeman thinks about how tast the time has gone by. "It seems to have been such a short time since Michelle enrolled in Kindergarten. Next year I will miss seeing her in the halls and around school," says Freeman.

Going through their locker, juniors Sandy and Sonya Elmore tell some good things about being a twin. "You can be in two places at one time," says Sandy Elmore. Sonya Elmore says, "You can switch classes and the teachers do not know the difference."

Twins that attend the high school are (front to back) juniors Sonya and Sandy Elmore, seniors Rob and Ross Sickmiller, seniors Jason and Jamie Atkinson, senior Mike Adkins and (not pictured) Marc Adkins, seniors Jennifer and Jeff Gayhart, juniors Stacy and Tracy Beaty, and juniors Teresa and Lisa Fields. Not pictured Jyl and Jonathan King.

Matched For Life

What was it like to be a twin? All senior Jennifer Gayhart had to say was, "For the first nine months it was crowded!"

Twins were a part of our every day school life. Although most of us had no idea what it was like to be a twin, the twins had no idea what it was like not to be a twin.

"I like being a twin because when you are little you always have someone to play with. The only bad thing about it is when one gets into trouble, usually, you both get into trouble," said senior Jamie Atkinson.

Senior Ross Sickmiller said, "Being a twin has its good and bad points. It's good because you can blame everything on the other one. It's bad because you have to live your life with people asking, "which one are you?"

Others agreed that the life of a twin wasn't boring. "Being a twin is really NEAT and there's rarely a dull moment," said junior Stacy Beaty. Junior Tracy Beaty added, "Being a twin is definitely different. It's not all fun though, because of the never-ending questions such as 'Are you the one dating what's his name?,' and of course, 'Is your birthday the same as hers?' I can honestly say that being a twin is never boring!"

Looking for the right book in the library are junior twins Stacy and Tracy Beaty. Stacy Beaty says, "On Friday nights a twin always had twice the selection of possible dates." Tracy Beaty says, "Being a twin is definitely an interesting life to live."

Sharing their homework, senior twins Marc and Mike Adkins study in the library. "It is weird to have someone walking around the school that looks just like you," says Marc Adkins.

"Most people are tired of schoolwork, but I enjoy the challenge of academics. I know studying now will help me in the future," says sophomore Regina Gilbert. Gilbert enjoys doing her schoolwork while sophomores Christy Garrett and Nancey Grubb take a break from academics.

Bending over to pick up his typing book, sophomore Brian Hall says, "I just love typing class. Every time I hit return the typewriter knocks my book off of my desk."

Raising her hand to state her opinion on an idea in student council, senior student council member Vicki Blaylock says, "The more involved you are, the more you feel an obligation to do your best and excel."

Three R's May Be Measuring Up To Mediocrity

Smoldering Education

Has the level of education ... the reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic — in our schools dropped? This was a question that was in the media recently. Some people believed that the graduates our nation's schools were turning out did not know what they needed to know to compete in the real world.

A test was given to obtain some idea of our school's academic ability. Four teachers were selected to give five questions from their department that they thought every high school student should know. The final result was an overall test average of 53

Overall the school averaged about the same when compared to a similiar nationwide test given by a CBS special in September called "Why are American Kids Flunking?" Principal Gary Nixon said, "I'm not surprised that the students of our school came out about the same as the students of the nation."

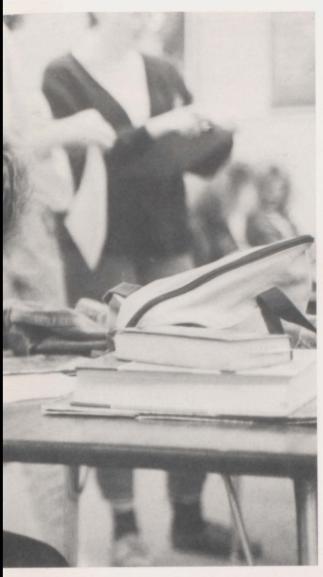

Nixon said, "I think that the problem is a lack of motivation not only in school but in our society." Teacher Flory Dunigan said, "The problem with our youth is a lack of motivation to learn. Their priorities aren't straight. They do not put enough emphasis on the business of learning."

Senior Bart Purcell said that he thought part of the problem was that there were not enough teachers, therefore there was not enough teacher-to-student instruction, and that some teachers did not have the experience they needed to do the job they were asked to do.

Concentrating on doing her homework, senior Rhonda Cox says, "I don't know how students can fail if they at least try to put some effort into their work."

Junior Whitney Clark watches a movie in Mr. Parson's second period world his-tory class. Clark says, "There would be a smaller failure ratio if the teachers would spend more time with each individual."

Taking a break from the realm of sociology, junior Chris Sims stops to read a book. Sims says, "My motto is — never take school home with you. You can always find time at school the next day to do last night's homework."

Do Mega Books Mean Mega Bucks For Later On?

Larger than Life

Listening intently to Mrs. Akins' history lecture, junior Selena Farr takes tour pages of notes. Farr says, "Boy, they sure do pile it on!"

With the start of a new year, students were forced into reality when mega homework and mega books began to make a mega pile. "Hopefully reading all these books will prepare me for college, but if it doesn't, I can at least start a small library," said senior Lori Underwood.

Many teachers felt that education had been influenced by changes in the economy. "Education has been influenced by political trends and by business trends where emphasis is placed on test scores and jobs. Sadly, for those who enjoy the intellectual pursuit of knowledge, the reality of food and clothing bypasses the intellectual nourishment of the mind," said sophomore English teacher Brenda Wyatt.

Some teachers felt that learning should be the emphasis, not financial matters. "Much of the emphasis on education today is focused on equipping students to make money. I feel that an equal emphasis should be put on knowledge for knowledge's sake — to make a well-rounded individual," said world history teacher Eugene Parsons.

Some students also felt that there was too much emphasis placed on making money instead of the education that was behind making money. "I don't think that the school systems in Cumberland County place any importance on education at all. We do not get taught things just for the pleasure of learning," said senior Karen Brookes

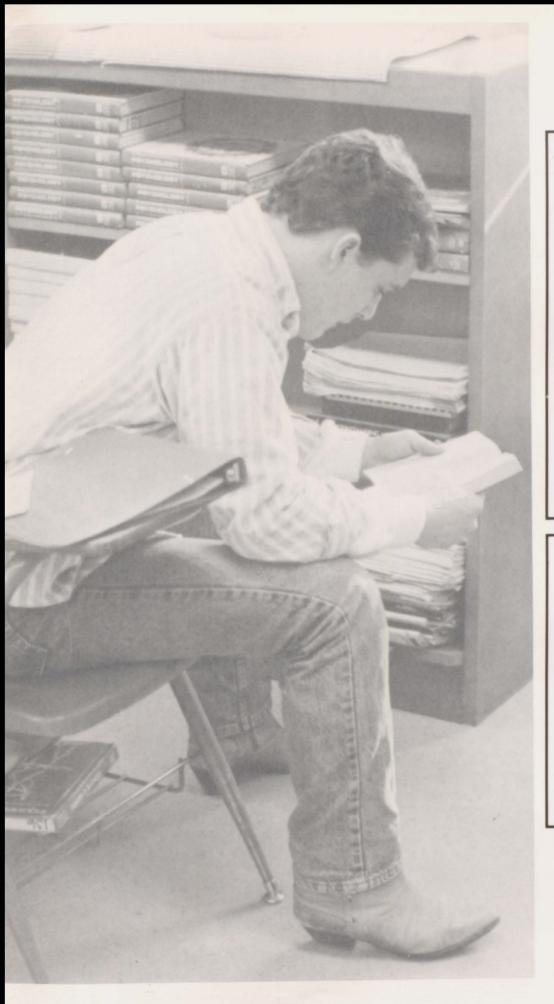

However, some students felt that making big money and a good education went together. "This society is for making big bucks by using education," said senior Thom Hassler.

Senior advanced English IV and French teacher Jane Parris felt that change was taking place. "There is a reoccurrence of thought that places emphasis on liberal arts which does not necessarily translate into mega bucks, but mega learning."

Looking up vocabulary words from To Kill a Mockingbird are sophomores Lisa Houston and Lisa Brewer. Brewer says, "I am glad I'm only a sophomore and have to read the smaller, easier books like To Kill a Mockingbird instead of the books like Atlas Shrugged."

"I think all aspects of education are important whether it be topics that we enjoy learning about or whether it be other non-interest areas that we need in order to reach a desired future objective. I would hate to think that all we teach and learn is just to make 'Big Bucks.' When I chose teaching as a profession, I definitely was not thinking of 'Big Bucks!"

Velma Buck Career Ladder Level III Math Teacher

"Education is a reflection of the desires of the society. You can see by the number of students who hold jobs already that they are putting more emphasis on making 'Mega Bucks' than on education."

Quietly discussing his English homework with seniors Heather Loveday and Tammy McCaleb, senior Joe Lowe says, "We don't call it cheating. We call it combined effort."

Trying to keep his eyes on his own paper, junior Todd Roysdon cannot resist the temptation. Roysdon says, "Cheating off some of these guys can be suicidal."

Contemplating a problem in his math class, sophomore Darrell Cotter says, "If students would study, cheating would not be as big a problem, because cheating would be unnecessary."

Cheating Replaces Notetaking and Studying

Studying? ... HAH!

Concentrating on the daily stock market report in economics, senior Michael Jackson says, "I've tried and tried, but there's no way to cheat on the market."

Cheating by some students seemed to become a second nature. Math teacher Rita Keyes, who graduated in 1982, said, "Cheating has more than increased since I was in school."

Senior India Brown said, "I'm too scared of getting caught to cheat. Many people cheat as much as three to four times in one class without getting caught, but some aren't so lucky." Senior David Daugherty said, "Although I've been caught cheating before, I still think cheating is easier than studying."

It seemed students did anything to get answers. History teacher Audrey Akins said, "The most popular way of cheating in my class is using cheat notes."

According to some of the teachers the number of students caught cheating had increased each year. English teacher Pat Locke said, "There isn't as much studying as there used to be ... with jobs, T.V., etc."

Some teachers felt that the penalty for cheating should have been a zero, a demerit, and a notice to the parents. Keyes said, "In general, students are not as conscientious. Also, teachers are not as rough on cheating as they used to be, nor are parents."

"Although students don't think much about cheating, they should realize that habits that are formed now will carry over into daily life experiences later on. It doesn't pay in the end," said guidance counselor Nancy Hyder.

Reading over their English notes, juniors Vickie Baker and Cristy Anderson study for an exam. Anderson says, "The guys who cheat make better grades than I do and they don't even have to study."

"Cheating on homework assignments seems to be as prevalent as cheating on tests. Copying answers to worksheets or having someone else write papers is as dishonest as and sometimes more damaging than cheating on exams."

Ducking Out Leads To Dropping Out

Broken Matches

Reading the Jet Contrail, sophomore Becky D'Armond keeps up with current events around the school. D'Armond says, "The newspaper beats a sociology lecture any day."

The teen dropout rate had anything but decreased. School absence had been one of the biggest contributing factors.

According to figures given by the absence computer print out, only nine weeks into the first semester, nine people had missed more than 20 days, 16 more than 15 days, and 73 had missed more than 10 days. Overall, approximately 1/5 of the school had missed more than 5 days. Thirty-seven percent of the multiple absences had been by sophomores, 36% had been by juniors, and 27% by seniors.

The class of '89 in the 10th grade had a composite of 459 people. It dropped to 410 in the eleventh grade, and by the second six-weeks of their senior year the total was down to 373. According to Mrs. Doris Smith, office secretary, about half the number were dropouts and half were transfers.

In a survey of advanced seniors, 1/3 said that they had considered dropping out of school. The major contributing factors, according to the seniors, were pregnancy, marriage, pressure from parents and teachers, homework, and a poor self-concept.

A club called "Pathfinders," directed by Mrs. Ann Looney, was organized to decrease teen dropout. Members were chosen on the basis of grades, number of abscences, and reading level.

Looney said, "All students need to realize to get a job they must get a high school diploma."

Working on eye-hand coordination, sophomore Sandra Hammond types. Hammond says, "Once you get started, typing is a breeze."

Pathfinder students sophomore Lisa Houston and Devonda Piercy listen to Pathfinder director Mrs. Ann Looney as she checks their grades. Houston says, "Pathfinders is a lot of fun to be in. I really enjoy it."

Enjoying the climate and environment on V-wing, home economics teacher Kaye Randolph says, "The new vocational wing is a nice place to work. It's quiet and clean (right now anyway)."

Looking at pictures with juniors Jody Hughes and Tammie Hensley, junior Trina Hinch says, "Looking at pictures doesn't take any thought, and after my English test, my brain has thought too much. It needs a break."

"I am, as all teachers, concerned about the high dropout rate. I wish there were a way to convince students that they ought to look beyond the immediate circumstances which cause them to drop. They need to see that a few years down the road, an education will probably help them more than anything else."

Visual and Performing Arts Classes Become Unpredictable

Arts Get A Part

Waiting to audition for the school play, senior Rob Sickmiller concentrates on his lines. Sickmiller says, "Auditioning for the play was exciting, nerve racking, and fun."

In some classes, it was understood that everyday a test would be taken, or a chapter would be read. Then, in other classes anything could or would happen. Students were told to be a bulldozer, sing "The Addams Family" theme, or draw Garfield. These unpredictable happenings occurred in Introduction to Theatre, Advanced Acting, Art I and II, or Choir.

Some teachers felt that these visual and performing arts classes were an important break from academics. "Classes for the arts are important in a normal schedule because a student can go from a formal classroom into an informal classroom and express their innermost feelings," said art teacher Jane Armes.

Getting used to unique experiences was a part of these classes. Some students enjoyed the different assignments.

"I liked drama when we did pantomime, because I got to swing an imaginary python around in an imaginary jungle," said junior Frank Copeland.

Of course, for some students, their teacher was the most unusual part of their arts class. "For awhile in choir, I thought Mr. Gibson was going to become a hare krishna because he always smiled on the dreariest days and said, 'Don't worry, be happy,' " said senior George Popovich.

However, choir teacher Marty Gibson seemed to sum up the positive aspects of visual and performing arts classes. "They are not sit-down-in-a-desk-doing-written-work kinds of classes. A change of pace from academics makes the overall school experience more interesting."

Walking to her next class, senior Renee Heintz says, "I don't have any performing arts classes because I don't need them to graduate and they don't have anything to do with the career field I plan to enter"

Leaning over the faces of seniors Philip Wyatt and Mark Hyder, seniors Scott VanWinkle and Jennifer Darnell prepare them for their masks in Drama. "I now know what King Tut had to go through," says Wyatt.

Practicing during first period, the marching band uses its class time to perfect its routines. Senior band member Jerry Pugh says, "It gets pretty cold and wet outside, but we have to practice."

Acting in his own version of "The Canterbury Tales," senior David Daugherty says, "Advanced class activities really bring out the devil in you."

Discussing the play audition, junior Ben Smith and senior George Popovich get a chance to relax. Popovich says, "Drama was a really great way to get rid of all my anxieties and to just sit and relax. Some of Ms. Michel's exercises really helped me out when I was feeling down."

"Performing arts classes help to provide a wellrounded education. They also provide another way for students to develop their special talents and abilities."

August Temperatures Affect Performance

Burning Up

Working on a new project in student council, junior Missy Peek fights the heat. Peek says, "We get enough heat from the everyday pressures of school without having to deal with the extreme temperatures."

With outside temperatures averaging in triple digits, the early part of the year was filled with the rustling of paper fans, the rattle of the few noisy air conditioners, and the circulation of petitions advocating air conditioning the entire school. The heat seemed to adversely affect overall student performance.

"The students looked like chickens in the heat," said English teacher Ms. Carol James. "Their eyes were glazed over and their mouths were wide open like little beaks. They also performed about as well as chickens."

Opinions on the mind/environment issue differed. "I think the heat really did affect our performance. I had to drink more cokes to keep down my thirst level, so more caffeine got into my system," said junior Daniel Carev.

"It made me irritable and hard to get along with. I was definitely distracted by the heat, but I don't think that it really affected my grades," said senior Eric Pelham.

Homeroom teachers gave petitions about purchasing air conditioners to students to obtain the signatures of parents.

The effectiveness of these petitions was not seen due to the fact that not enough were taken home and returned to the school to present to the schoolboard.

"The issue has died down with the onset of winter. I suppose we will have to take it up again when the summer heat creeps into our school system," said Pelham.

Looking in a microscope, senior Nancy Marshall, juniors Jeff Smith, and Robby Parsons battle the hot environment. Parsons says, "In these temperatures, who can concentrate on molecules?"

Participating in an economics commercial with senior Brian Smith, senior Jay Meadows says, "The high temperatures can drive you to wear some of the skimplest outfits."

Staying awake and concentrating in the hot weather is hard for senior Whitney Dodson and junior Suzanne Breeding. "Stressing out from the heat makes me wish the school would splurge and buy air conditioners," says Dodson.

"The climate is important to the learning atmosphere of the classroom. This fall the students could not hear because of the fans, they could not see or write because of the sweat, so they just sat there and perspired."

Catch

Not wanting to break tradition, sophomore John Opter participates in Beta initiation by showing his many facial expressions. Other initiates watch and wait their turn to do something stupid. Opter says, "I wanted to be no-ticed and show everyone that I was proud to be a Beta initiate."

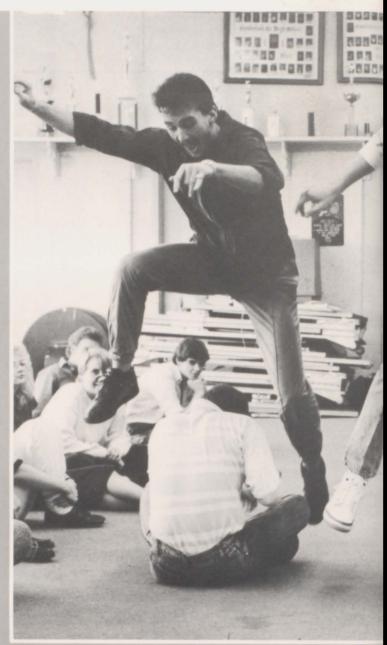

Enjoying drama class, seniors Tom Reed and Philip Wyatt play open freeze tag. Reed says, "Drama helps you excel by leaps and bounds, though sometimes dangerous acting helps you through school."

Finding new ways to express themselves, drama class members junior Kristy Kirkland, seniors Guy Looney, George Popovich, Heather Loveday, drag the lifeless body of junior Frank Copeland. Looney says, "In drama class, I have the opportunity to work with others to produce a kind of art that we can appreciate and at the same time have fun."

Playing the game "Wake Up," senior Scott VanWinkle tries to wake up sophomore Charlotte Denny. VanWinkle says, "I have fun in drama class because Miss Michel lets us have fun and it is a break from class."

Drama Gets Down to Business

Creating more activities than ever made for a busy year for the Drama club. "There was a lot of tedious work involved in planning all the things we did this year," said cosecretary senior Sherri Hall.

Drama's first activity was the football homecoming parade. The club constructed its own float. "As far as I know, we're the first club to ever make its own float. It really made us feel proud," said sophomore Jenna Kinstler.

A Christmas play, "The Gift of the Magi," was the next activity on the agenda. The play starred junior Melissa Knowles, seniors Earl Patton and Regina Selby, and sophomore Heather Triplett, and was performed for the faculty, certain elementary schools, and the student body. Knowles said, "Being in the Christmas play was a lot of hard work."

By December, club members and non-club members tried out for the school musical "Grease." Drama sponsor Marilouise Michel chose this play to get away from the traditional high school musical. "I wanted to do a show that was different from the plays you usually see at this high school," said Michel

Thirty students were chosen to be in the play, making for a larger cast than usual. Lead characters included Patton, senior Kristi Boss, senior Jeff Gayhart, junior Julie Emery, junior Kate Niblick, Knowles, junior Carmen Roberts, senior Rob Sickmiller, senior Shandi Pardi, senior Jon Hall, senior Guy Looney, senior George Popovich, junior Victor Williamson, and juniors Vicky Benischek and Heather Nichols.

Michel said, "I feel we've accomplished a lot, and shown everyone that drama is a club to be reckoned with."

Showing off their homecoming spirit, the drama club displays their float. "I was very happy that our float was a success, but I wish it had not rained so that everyone could have seen it," says senior drama member Lori Underwood.

Singing before the talent show, choir displays their basketball homecoming spirit. Senior April Carr says, "I thought the song 'The Basketball Rap' was a lot of fun and I also think it fit in great with homecoming."

Students Get Lift

Upward Bound was a pre-college program designed to prepare young people for education beyond high school. Sponsor Jody Bean said, "Upward Bound provides opportunities for academic improvement, recreational activities, and cultural events that many students might otherwise be deprived of. It's a very worthwhile organization with many benefits to students."

Some of these benefits were individual tutoring, career counseling, and assistance in applying for financial aid or scholarships.

To be selected for the Upward Bound program, each student had to complete an application, supply three references and recommendations from teachers, and meet federal guidelines of economic need.

New Attitudes Enlighten Harmonies

"The choral program is on the move," said chorus director Marty Gibson. "I've got a group of talented students this year, and there is a better attitude in general."

The mixed chorus, along with girls' chorus and general music, met every day to rehearse music and develop good singing techniques. "I want to make a career in music, so a good choral program is important to me," said junior mixed chorus student Julie Emery.

The activities on the choir's agenda were numerous. On Veteran's Day, the three periods conducted a concert program for the student body. The classes also held a concert at Martin Jr. High School on November 1, as well as participating in the annual Christmas program.

Five students from mixed chorus made the All-East State try-outs, and eight students attended the M.T.S.U. Honors Chorus. Mixed chorus also gave two concerts prior to the Christmas break at the Rotary Club and the Fairfield Glade Women's Club. Gibson also had plans to send many of his members to the Roane State Humanities Festival, and to attend two choral festivals in the spring.

"By attending choral festivals and presenting programs to the public, we can continue to grow as a true chorus," said Gibson.

Team Experiences Boost

"We have a small following of fans, but the interest for soccer seems to have increased this year," said biology teacher and coach Annell Shaffer.

Regular practices began the first Monday of February, with the first soccer game on the first Monday of March.

On March the fourth there was a Jamboree at St. Andrews in Sewanee, Tennessee. All teams in the region played each other in thirtyminute halves.

Helping out his team, senior Espen Haugen stands guard in front of his goal. "Being a Viking, I love the challenging nature of the sport," says Haugen. Senior Rob Sickmiller said, "Soccer requires a lot of stamina because of all the running around that is required."

Senior player Brian Selby said, "We will have a better team this year because we are more dedicated." Shaffer agreed, "We have a small dedicated team with lots of seniors participating. With the help of our experienced exchange students, I anticipate a winning season."

Defending his goal, senior Rob Sickmiller chases Ronnie Baylosis. Sickmiller says, "Soccer takes coordination; you're constantly thinking, and you never have time to rest."

Chess Team Starts Over

Chess gained a new sponsor. Librarian Donna Goss took the place of former sponsor, art teacher Jane Armes.

Goss said, "We have no returning players this year, so we are trying to rebuild the team. We know this will be hard since this is my first year as sponsor of the team, but with a lot of hard work, we'll do the best we can."

As well as being the first year for Goss, it was also the first year for some of her players.

Senior Guy Looney said, "This year is the beginning of a new team. We've got all new players and an all new coach. The factors will make for an interesting year and hopefully we'll end up having a great season."

Legal Eagles See What It's About

One of the new clubs formed this year was the Association of Legal Students. "It was the first year, but we got off to a great start with several members," said vice-president Criss Woods.

They visited several courthouses to see lawyers in action. They also went to see a Federal Court case in Nashville.

The club hoped to return next year.

Slopes Melted

The Ski club started the year without snow. "I hope we use our snow days so I can hit the slopes," said sophomore Sean Cox.

The club hoped for snow and made plans. "We plan to go to Cumberland Gardens, and spend a weekend in Gatlinburg," said senior Jay Meadows.

"The ski club allows me to ski cheaper and I love to ski," said senior Vicki Blaylock.

Teens Against Drugs Set Drug-Free Goals

TAD (Teens Against Drugs) was started by the Cumberland County Drug Alliance because of Governor Ned McWherter's campaign for a drug-free Tennessee.

TAD's purpose was to influence younger children to say "no" to drugs and alcohol and to help change the lives of people that had already started the habit. TAD sponsor Nathan Ingram said, "Our goal is to reduce chemical abuse in Cumberland County. We will do it only when we have students encouraging other students not to use drugs. That is what TAD does."

President of TAD senior Whitney Dodson said, "I joined TAD because I realized how serious the drug problem was and I wanted to do something to help stop it."

TAD went to elementary schools to talk to students and tell them how to say "no." They also wrote articles in the newspaper. The main goal for the TAD group was to have a drug-free all night graduation party. Secretary of TAD senior Jennifer Darnell said, "I thought that the graduation party would be a great idea and maybe it would keep us all safe."

Sharing Faith Important

A Bible study and prayer time were the biggest part of the Bible club's meeting during Friday's activities in English teacher Mrs. Lou Crowder's room.

The club chose as a group not to elect officers. One member each meeting would lead a Bible study on a subject of his choice.

Sophomore Stephanie Wilson said, "The Bible study time is really great. The study is very successful and each member is given a chance to express their views on the subject that we are studying."

The Bible club combined study with prayer and made it a point to truly live the Christian life. Senior member Kelley Eastwood said, "We feel like it is very important for us to live what we talk about; otherwise, we are not any different than the rest of the world."

little kids see us saying 'no' that they will look up to us and say 'no' too!"

Guild Publishes MIRRORS

The Writer's Guild published its annual literary magazine, MIRRORS. The magazine provided a way for students to publish their creative works.

"I feel it is important for students to have a way to express themselves and the magazine allows them to," said senior president April Carr. The guild held various fund raisers to raise money for the magazine. Without the efforts of the non-members, the magazine would never have made it.

"Our success is not due to just our work, but also to those who have supported us and taken time to submit their work," said senior treasurer Lori Underwood.

Competitions Motivate

Hosting the eighth grade county math contest each spring was one of the activities the math club participated in. They also participated in the state math competition held at Tennessee Tech.

Co-president senior Jennifer McAlister said, "The math competitions are a significant part of the math club because they motivate many students, especially the eighth graders, who have not yet chosen their high school curriculum."

The math club also planned to have a trophy case installed on E-wing to display any awards that were received.

Senior math club member Diane Westerfield said, "I think the trophy case is a good idea because it encourages other students to join our club."

Traditions Hold Fast

"I couldn't believe it when they rounded up all the Beta initiates and took us into the gym and humiliated us in front of the whole school by making us breakdance and then sing 'Amazing Grace,' " said new Beta member sophomore Amy Kearley.

The informal Beta initiation for the new Beta members consisted of a dunce cap, sign, and carrying a dictionary and a teddy bear. Many of the new members were caught at activity period by old members and were made to do embarrassing things.

They also had to go through the formal initiation where their friends and family watched them take the Beta Club oath. Students with a 90 average or above were accepted into the club

Old member senior Kristie Smith said, "I found Tara Nelson, a sophomore initiate, outside the lunchroom where I saw she was just dying to duck walk and sing."

Senior president Denton Brock said, "I have really enjoyed being in Beta and especially getting to be mean to the new members the way I was made fun of when I was a new initiate."

Interaction Makes a Difference

"Interact has been able to get a lot accomplished this year. I feel like we have made a difference," said senior club president Missy Weidner.

Interact continued its traditional community service projects such as making Christmas and Thanksgiving possible for local needy families. They also painted the bathrooms on D-wing.

Interact was sponsored by the local Rotary International Club. Sponsors were algebra teacher Jim Dunigan, drama instructor Marilouise Michel, choir director Marty Gibson, and from the local Rotary Club, Pepe Perron and Scott Shanks.

Dunigan said, "Interact has continued its community traditions, and will continue in the future."

Future Einsteins Broaden Interests

For those students interested in the fields of science and technology a science club was there to provide a way to explore. Sponsor Barbara Mayfield said, "The club was there to broaden the horizon of students interested in science."

Senior Regina Selby said, "Science club is a wonderful way to learn more about science." Among the activities the club sponsored were trips to the hospital and the Oak Ridge Museum of Science and Energy.

Prepared To Plant

"The Future Farmers of America is an organization dedicated to the development of young minds," said FFA sponsor Alfred Gilliam.

FFA was involved in various activities throughout the school year. Livestock and soil judging, parliamentary procedures, extemporaneous and prepared speeches, were just a few of the involved activities that FFA participated in.

On November 4th, the FFA parliamentary procedure team from Cumberland County won the Highland Rim District competition, held at Tennessee Tech. The team went on to Gallatin, TN, where they placed 4th in the Sub-Regional Competition.

Secretary senior Palla Hassler said, "Being an officer isn't easy. It takes a lot of hard work and dedication, but you get out of it what you put into it."

"What we're trying to do here is to develop leadership skills. The speeches, parliamentary procedures, judging teams, etc., are all designed to help the prospective farmer survive in a competitive agricultural occupation," said Gilliam.

Homes Will Never Be the Same

Along with several other clubs, Future Homemakers of America prepared their members for the future. "I joined because I thought it would help me in the future," said junior Sandra Edington. FHA gave its members experience that would help them after high school. "I have really learned a lot and I feel it will really help me later in life," said senior Bonnie England.

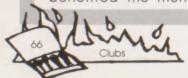

Some of the activities that benefited the members were learning how to properly cook and safe household practices. "At first, learning to cook was a challenge, but now I can easily do it," said senior Vaneisa Tabor.

Another advantage that FHA members had was being on the new wing and having new equipment to work with. "Since we moved to the new wing, we got new equipment and it's more fun," said sophomore Claudia Carrigan.

First-Hand Experience is Remembered

The HERO club experienced many real-life activities that helped them gain more responsibility.

Senior Kim Pierce said, "The duties we have in HERO would help us to have responsibility when we get a family started."

During the second semester HERO members cooked food for people at restaurants daily. Many members felt this would be a help for them later in life.

Senior Nikki Landers said, "All the things we do now, we will remember later on. That is how we get the experience of cooking and taking care of children — chores that we will most likely face in the years to come."

Houses Go Up

Building trades was designed to help students develop carpentry skills. "Building trades is a good opportunity for a young person who is interested in carpentry," said junior Jeff Houston.

"I feel we have one of the top building trades programs in the state," said teacher Roscoe Freeman. "Mr. Freeman is tough but is easy to get along with," said Houston.

As an annual activity the class completed a house. Freeman said, "We will start and finish our second house this year."

Riding in the parade, Cindy Biaylock, Devonda Piercy, Michelle Cross, Sandra Bohannon, Tonya Bolles, James Roberts, Lee Ann Vallad, Delvin Marsh, and sponsor Mrs. Looney represent Pathfinders. "Being in Pathfinders helps me everyday in remembering now important education is to me," says sophomore president Lisa Houston.

Pathfinders Motivate

There were many new clubs and Pathfinders was one of them. It was sponsored by J.D. Atkinson and Ann Looney.

Students were motivated to do work by getting paid money. Also they were rewarded by cash for accomplishing evreyday tasks.

"Getting paid for going to school really motivated me to go. Right now, we're earning points for a trip to Opryland. That has really inspired us all," said sophomore Devonda Piercy. Other students agreed those were their motivations.

Sophomore Rosalee Hagen said, "The things I like most about Pathfinders is getting money and going on a trip to Opryland." Meetings were held throughout the year on Fridays during activity period.

Economics Substitution Is Much More

DECA (Distributive Education Clubs of America) was a marketing class that could be taken instead of economics.

DECA sponsor, Mr. J.D. Atkinson said, "I enjoy the personal contact with students as they participate in community projects, leadership activities, vocational training, and social interaction. The friendships forged during these activities endure for a lifetime."

DECA held an initiation and installation at the state park, attended the Fall Leadership Conference in Murfreesboro, attended the Southern Conference in Nashville, assisted a family at Christmas time, gave supplies to Kids Inc., and were now preparing to compete at the Regional DECA contest in Murfreesboro.

VICA Works Work In

"Going to the nursing homes was a great experience. Most of us were apprehensive about what to expect and the reaction of the patients. After we had gone to one, the second one was no problem. We had a really nice time giving them the fruit baskets," said senior Michelle Prevatte.

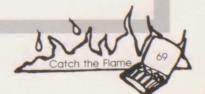

The VICA club took fruit baskets to various nursing homes around the Crossville area for Christmas. Senior Curt Buckner dressed up as Santa Claus to deliver the baskets. Buckner said, "I really enjoyed playing Santa Claus for the nursing home. Giving the fruit baskets to the elderly was a great experience and one I'll never forget," said Buckner.

VICA allowed students to

VICA allowed students to get experience at a job while going to school. Senior Brooks Boston said, "I'm really glad I took VICA because it gets me out of school early and allows me to get some work experience. If I didn't get out of school early I'd definitely be a LOON!"

Competition Means Study

"Most meets require an A student, a B student, and a C student for competitions. A and B students aren't that tough, but it's tough to find dedicated C students who want to be on the team. But we've come a long way towards excellence," said sponsor Flory Dunigan.

In the Academic Competition Team's third year, the team attended events such as the University of Tennessee Bowl, the Energy Bowl, and the National Decathalon. "The Decathalon is the one everyone's looking forward to. It's the big competition and the one that we do the best in," said senior Dianne Westerfield.

the teachers."

TOEC helped to improve poise, sociability, attitude, and tact. President senior Vaneisa Tabor said, "TOEC helps to qualify us for management-secretarial positions '

Also, TOEC members felt that the club helped to improve their leadership abilities. Secretary Melinda Patton said, "We are a very resourceful club. We have responsible leaders."

Training for the upcoming season sparks the determination of junior Rick Whisnant assisted by junior Greg Houston. Whisnant pushes to the limit lifting 450 pounds. "During a workout when I feel I can't go on, I remember 'No pain, no gain' and work that much harder," says Whisnant.

Season Leaves Highlights and Work

Pulling It All Together

Out of the ten football games played this season, the Jets were successful at winning three, although the Jets were two and two at midseason.

There were a few moments and games the players did choose to remember. Junior Terry Christopher said, "My best game was against McMinn. I threw a touchdown and ran for two." The Jets lost the game to McMinn, but won the games against York, Soddy Daisy, and Ooltewah.

The homecoming game against Ooltewah was won, even though the rain tried to put out the team's spirit. Senior Kim Rogers said, "The rain really poured at the homecoming game, but I stayed til the end.

New uniforms and jackets were a highlight of the year. Senior Scott Vanwinkle said, "Our coaches felt like the new jackets would make us feel more like a unit."

Hard Work Needed Before Success Pays Practice Makes Perfect

Football was not all fun and games. It consisted of a lot of hard work and hard practice. Before the football players went on the field in front of the crowd, they first went through hours of practice each week.

Each week before the game, the football team underwent a series of workouts and conditioning drills. The workouts mainly consisted of bench presses, squats, and dead lifts. The team worked out three days a week.

The part of the practice many of the team dreaded most was the conditioning drills. Senior football player Tom Gaining over 700 yards this season with 169 yards against York, Junior Heath Dykes runs for the goal.

Reed said, "Players often resort to fake injuries. Even though this is a good tactic, it's not recommended by the coaches, so you would not get away with it."

The conditioning drills were two days a week, but the drills were not all that there was to do. Along with the drills, the team went through various stretching and agility exercises.

Senior football player Bryan Garrett said, "Practice was the most unforgettable experience of my football career. Unfortunately, it is also the one I would most like to forget."

Working toward a win in the 135-150 weight division, junior David Haston, assisted by junior Jason Napier, gets ready for a 365 pound squat. Haston says, "Lifting weights is a pain in more than one way, but when you get out on the field and feel strong, you play strong."

Making a flying tackle on the opponent, #1 junior Jason Napier helps in the defeat of Ooltewah in the homecoming game. Napier says, "Because football is a violent sport, it lets me release some of my frustrations on my victims. I don't think I could do that playing chess."

"Injuries are part of the game, but, thank goodness, most are relatively minor," says coach Mike DeRossett. He helps to relieve the pain of a cramp for junior Heath Dykes.

Three Years Make Meaningful Memories Experience Required

It was raining hard. The players rushed onto the field and ripped up the homecoming banner before them — for the seniors, it was their last homecoming — the chance to make it burn. "I wanted to make my last homecoming the most memorable game ever, and it came pretty close," said senior Michael Jackson.

"Seniors are the key to any football team, because they directly influence the attitude, work habits, and discipline of the younger players," said coach Gary Cooper.

Senior Mark Hyder said, "I felt like I had a responsibility to be an example to the sophomores and juniors. When I was a sophomore, I looked up to the seniors."

"Our seniors have shown the ability to hang in there for three years under, sometimes, adverse conditions. I'm sure those three years are full of memories," said coach Mike DeRossett.

They have been through the program, know the traditions, and those things that contribute the positive and negative to a program. Wyatt says, "I guess there were times when I wondered if it was all worth it, but I'm really glad that I stuck with it. I've got a lot of memories to look back on."

Six Seniors Lead the Ladies Tough and Tournament Ready

"We opened up the season very well. Our main objective was to learn and get better every game. We had six seniors, so that gave us experience which really helped," said Lady Jet coach Teresa Sherrill. "The seniors were all leaders," said junior Cheryl Page.

At the beginning of the season the Lady Jets earned the nickname "Cardiac Kids" for their comeback wins in the fourth quarter. "Everything seemed to come together for us in the fourth quarter. It really scared coach though, because we didn't play well until then," said junior Michelle Jackson.

After Christmas, the flu put several Lady. Jets out of action. "One game, seven players out of fifteen could dress out. We had to be careful not to foul," said senior Kristie Smith.

"We were all sick playing Bradley Central, but everyone was ready mentally. It really hurt to lose by one point," said senior Jennifer Gayhart.

At the halfway mark of the season, the Lady Jets had an overall record of 8-4, and a district record of 2-1. "No matter how many we lose or win, we strive to be in top condition by tournament time," said Sherrill.

After getting a good position for the shot, senior Carolyn Jones makes her two points. Jones says, "It's very hard to shoot the ball when somebody puts their hands in front of your face."

With picture-perfect performance, leading scorer Michelle Jackson goes up for two points. "Playing basketball gives me a natural high," says Jackson.

Inexperience Hampers Balanced Team Togetherness Proves Tough

"Inexperience is a paradox
— it makes you too anxious to do some things, and too scared to do others," said
head basketball coach Mark
Bray.

The Jets returned three seniors from last season. They were joined by Philip Wyatt who chose to sit out his junior year

The season started out strong for the boys against Manchester and Wartburg. They compiled a record of 2-0. Then, the Jets had a series of ups and downs. They lost to Sparta and Soddy Daisy, beat York Institute and Cleveland, then lost two games in the Cleveland Kiwanis tournament.

"We can't seem to play together. But like coach says, playing together to win takes a lot of practice," said junior Rick Hayes.

The Jets had a balance of scoring from inside and out. Rick Hayes and Philip Wyatt carried the inside load, while Pedja Novakovich, Scott Van-Winkle, Terry Christopher and Bryan Krabousanos helped from long range. "I think our most exciting game was against Sweetwater. Rick and I both had dunks, and they really brought the crowd to their feet," said junior Pedja Novakovich.

Junior Terry Christopher said, "I like to shoot three pointers because it gets the crowd on its feet. It's like P.J. or Rick dunking it."

Unsung Heroes Run Show

They came to every practice. They went to every game. They never got to play. Who were these dedicated fans to the sport of basketball? The managers — of course.

"We worked hard to make sure everything went okay during practice and games," said sophomore manager Bryant Henry. The managers did everything from taping ankles to taping ballgames. They set up chairs for home games and prepared uniforms for away

"Our managers practically run the behind-the-scenes show. They do a lot of things that nobody notices like washing the boys' uniforms and making sure everybody has one before we leave for an away game," said coach Mark Bray.

Taking stats for both teams was a job all managers undertook. "Sometimes taking stats can be hard because you start watching the game instead of writing down who did what," said senior Jamie Atkinson.

"Our managers help a lot, but if there weren't so many of them we wouldn't have to be so crowded on the bus," said sophomore Lady Jet Susie Speich. The Lady Jets alone had seven managers.

"The managers supported and cheered for us. When we won, they won. When we lost, they felt they lost, too," said senior Lady Jet Jennifer Gaybart

Trying to pass the ball in, junior Cheryl Page looks for an open guard. "I like to pass the ball in, but sometimes the pressure can be tremendous," says Page.

Cheerleaders Spark Up the Spirit Crowd Joins In

"Cheerleading is now fun for both the cheerleaders and the crowd," said varsity squad member junior Missy Bernabei.

Cheerleaders worked on cheers dealing with crowd involvement to get the teams more motivated. The cheerleaders learned the material from the United Cheerleading Association Camp they attended this summer.

Cheerleading sponsor Blanche Webb said, "This year has been a lot of fun. Cheerleaders are there to get the crowd going rather than to compete."

Cheerleaders were impressed with the difference in the spirit shown by the crowd.

They felt it had come a long way since the past.

Varsity squad member senior Gladys Maddux said, "The spirit has really made a dramatic difference from the past. I'm glad the difference was made my senior year."

Cheerleaders were divided into two different squads, varsity and junior varsity. Neither squad had a captain.

Junior varsity squad member sophomore Becky D'Armond said, "Not having a captain is better. It helps us all to have a responsibility and makes us all work harder to be equal."

Practice was held two days a week during football season and one during basketball lasting from 2:30 to 5:00. Varsity squad member junior Suzanne Breeding said, "I like the practice schedule — it gives us enough time to get the cheers down. It also gives us time for other activities."

The cheerleaders worked hard to raise the school spirit. Webb said, "It was hard at first to gain the respect that the cheerleaders needed to get through the year, but after we had shown that we really meant business the school gradually started to show some improvement. We had finally gotten some school spirit and pride!"

Tennis Can't Help but Improve Experiencing No Set Backs

Coming off of winning seasons, the Jets and Lady Jets really had no visible setbacks in their futures. "There's nothing standing in our way," said senior Earl Patton. Coach Jill Lay said, "Both the guys and girls had good seasons last year, and neither team is losing much as far as experience goes. I am looking to a great season this year."

Placing second in District 10, the Jets lost their sixth seed to graduation, but two experienced sophomores Micol Guigou and Mark Krabousaros, joined the team in March. Jun-

Fortunately, mine is." ior team member Stuart Smith said, "Guigou and Krabosaros are great players and our team will no doubt have much more depth of talent this year."

After spending a winning season without 1987 District player of the year Crystal Couch, the Lady Jets felt very ready for this year. "Last year with everyone moved up a seed, we won a lot of matches. But with Crystal back, everyone will be moved back down and we should win a lot more matches," said junior Charlene Smith.

Boys of Spring Come Off Winning Season

Baseball Bombers Emerge

"Coach Herring has brought a winning attitude to our baseball program. He works us hard, but our winning season made all the hard work pay off," said senior baseball member Brian Smith.

With a new field under construction and after one year with a new coach, the baseball team experienced its best yet. The 1987-88 team won eight games and lost two. "I think the field will help our program. We are still behind in the district, but at least this is a step in the right direction," said senior team member Tim Henry.

The hopes for this year's team were high. The taste of winning would hopefully make the squad continue to succeed. "Our baseball team made great strides last year in regaining the respect associated with a winning program. Our overall record really doesn't indicate how far our team came last year. Hopefully this small taste of winning will motivate this year's squad," said coach Randy Herring.

Volleyball Ends On Disappointment Talent Isn't Enough

"We had all the talent needed, but we just didn't use that talent to our advantage. We lacked team spirit and unity as a team. But this year was fun, and we all had a good time," said junior Sheila Dial.

"The season was disappointing, but I think most of the team members enjoyed having the opportunity to compete against other schools," said coach Carolyn Landreth.

The Lady Jet Spikers had an increase in home games this season. "The increase in home games was very helpful to us, and we had a lot of support from our fans," said sophomore

The junior varsity team was pleased with its performance as they finished the season with a record of 3-4. "We all worked well together as a team, which helped us accomplish what we wanted," said sophomore Amy Wilson. "We were all pleased with our performance. We worked hard in practice and it paid off in the end," said junior Jennifer Young.

"We had what we needed to win, but we just didn't show it all the time. Overall I think the season went o.k.," said senior Cyndi Akins.

Young Team Makes It to Regionals Fairways To Drive

Off and putting with their second-year coach Richard Fields, the golf team had to start with a young and inexperienced team with only four players returning from last season.

Fields said, "We had a young and inexperienced team this year, so we didn't do as well as we would have liked. Next year the team should be more experienced and hopefully we will have a better season."

Although the team posted a moderate record, they were able to place second in the district and this enabled them to play in the regional tournament.

Senior Guy Looney said, "The team this year had matured from last year tremendously. We made it to the regional tournament and although we lost, it gave the juniors experience that will help them next year."

Fields said that most of the team would be returning for another season of teeing off.

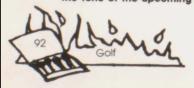

Junior Greg Wyatt said, "This year we were a young team. We didn't have a great regular season but we did make it to the regionals. I believe if the guys all work hard and dedicate themselves we'll have a great season next year. I'm looking forward to it."

Taking careful aim, senior Jay Meadows concentrates on his game. Meadows says, "Golf is the most exciting, trustrating, and relaxing thing I do."

With the sun in his face, junior Greg Wyatt awaits to hit his first shot. Wyatt says, "The first shot of a round is probably the most important of the day. It sets the tone of the upcoming holes."

"Which club do I use?" That is the question junior Scott Looney asks himself while preparing for his next shot. Looney says, "Club selection is important because it can save par, and can give you an opportunity to make a birdie."

"Golf is a challenging sport but I enjoy it because of the tough competition," says sophomore James Parrot. He practices his technique before the game.

Getting ready to tee off, senior Guy Looney pulls back for a hit. Looney says, "This was my last year and I finally got to go to the district tournament. It was great to bring in a good score." New Idea Gets Positive Feedback Perfecting the Pick-Up Game

Many students who did not have the opportunity to participate in team sports got their chance through the new intramural basketball league.

Senior student council member David Bilbrey, who came up with the idea, felt that the league would have a positive effect on students and the school. Bilbrey said, "I thought the league would be a good way to promote school spirit and get the student body involved. Although it's very hard to get everything organized, I believe it's worthwhile and lots of fun."

In total, there were twelve teams participating, with six teams playing in the mornings before school hours and six teams playing on Saturday mornings. The games were to go on for fifteen weeks, and end with a championship match between the teams with the best records during a Friday activity.

Students had various reasons for playing in the league. Junior Brian Tollett said, "It's fun to just play basketball on a team without the pressures of coaches and practices."

Senior Wayne Burns, whose team, the Hooters, had the best record in the morning league, said, "The thrill of beating someone and humiliating them in front of the entire school really makes me want to keep playing."

P.E. teachers and coaches were recruited to officiate these games. Some teachers believed that the positive attitude of students helped the league to succeed. Health and P.E. teacher and football coach Hollis Bolin said, "The kids make officiating not so hard. They're very cooperative, they work hard, and do a good job. The fact that they rarely question calls makes everyone's job a little easier."

Some students also felt that the league should continue in later years. Junior Ben Smith said, "There are so many good athletes who don't have time to play for the school. The league is an activity I hope student council will carry on so that everyone can have their chance to shine."

The Sport Around team was the winner of the Intramural Championships.

Trying to out rebound his opponent, senior Tony Davis gets ready to grab the ball. Davis says, "I like the intense competition that this sport brings forth on the court."

Trying to find an open teammate, Junior Keith Atkinson waits for the right moment to pass the ball. "Intramural basketball gives me something to do on Saturday mornings, and it gives the ones not good enough to play varsity basketball a chance to play," says Atkinson.

Beginning each year a class elects the representation they want. The class of '89 officers consist of president Angela Roysdon, vice-president Ted Monday, secretary Jenniter Darnell, and treasurer Jeff Gayhart. Senior sponsor J.D. Atkinson says, "Long after they have graduated, the 'spirit of '89' will remain at CCHSI'

"If I had known this much work, dedication, and heartache would go into being a class officer, I would never have done it," said senior class treasurer Jeff Gayhart.

Class officers put in a lot of hard work. Roysdon said, "Being senior class president is a lot of hard work and responsibility, but I am very honored to have been elected. I really enjoy working with students and great sponsors that care enough to make our senior class great."

The class of '89 won the football homecoming. Darnell said, "All the hard work and effort in preparing for homecoming really paid off! The seniors were on top!"

Setting goals and trying to reach them gave the officers extra incentive. Gayhart said, "Setting goals made us work harder and makes for a successful year."

eniors Savor Three-Year Sweep

"Three years of desire, dedication, determination, and especially pride in our senior class of '89 helped us to achieve our three-year victory in powderpuff," said senior Tracie Cox.

When the class of '89 were sophomores they lost their first game to the juniors. Then they had to play the seniors and beat them, which gave the sophomores a chance to get back at the juniors again, which the sophomores won. "Our sophomore year people thought we were nothing because we were newcomers but we proved them wrong by winning the championship," said senior Shannon Blalock.

When the class of '89 were juniors they had to play the sophomores in three overtimes and the juniors came out on top. The seniors were defeated after six overtimes with the sophomore class. Then the junior class had to face the sophomores again for the championship, which the juniors won. "The sophomores were tough to beat our junior year, but we knew we couldn't let them beat us or we would lose a chance to win three years in a row," said senior Carolyn Jones.

When the class of '89 became seniors, they won their first game against the sophomores. Then they advanced to play the juniors. The senior class beat the juniors by a score of 26-0, which made them three-year powderpuff champions. "We worked hard to be three-year champs and I was proud to be a coach of the winning class of '89," said senior Jason Atkinson.

As graduation drew near, the well-known words, "What are you going to be when you grow up?" were closer to a more definite answer.

For senior Jay Meadows a field in Biology Science — Sports Medicine was a choice he made for his career. "I've always been good in science in school. It is the most natural subject for me."

Heather Loveday was not as sure of future plans, but knew what choices she had to choose from. "I'll either choose between Sociology or Psychology. I enjoy helping other people," said Loveday.

Some people enjoyed working with children. Senior Donna Johnson wanted to start in a field of Elementary Education. Johnson said, "I love working with children. I hope to help mold young minds."

Senior Jennifer Darnell also wanted to help children. Darnell said, "I think a field in child psychology would be best for me because of my love for children and my hate for unhappiness."

Senior Mike Turner felt that he had two choices — go into the Air Force or go to medical school.

Filling out a form for college, senior Heather Loveday says, "Making a final decision on which college to attend was difficult, but after I decided, I felt like a load had been lifted off of me."

hoices Are Narrowed

It was time once again for seniors to seriously consider the college alternative. Many seniors had already decided on the university they had planned to attend and the courses they were going to take.

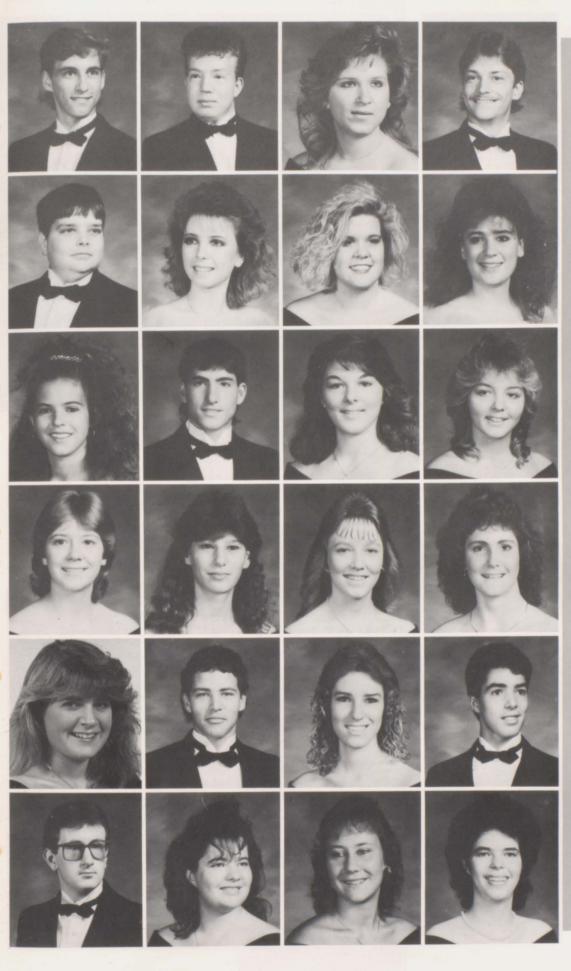

"I plan on attending Roane State Community College for two years, then I will attend either UT or MTSU to gain my Bachelor's Degree in Commercial Art or Graphic Layout Design," said senior George Popovich.

There were many things to take into consideration when selecting the right college. These factors included cost, convenience, type of courses available, and financial assistance available.

"I don't plan on attending college right away. I plan to join the Army, and then go to college on the GI Bill," said senior Jimmie Keck.

Selection of a college may not have been based on academic reasons. Some personal reasons may have been involved. "I want to attend U.T., because it is a major university right next door, and my brother goes there," said senior Philip Wyatt.

aking Care Of Business Means Sacrificing Time

For many seniors their last year of school was a time to get a job. Senior Lonnie Norrod, who works at Shoney's, said, "I find it necessary to have a job. It gives me a chance to experience the real world of 'paying your own way' and not only that, but it is also nice to just have some money."

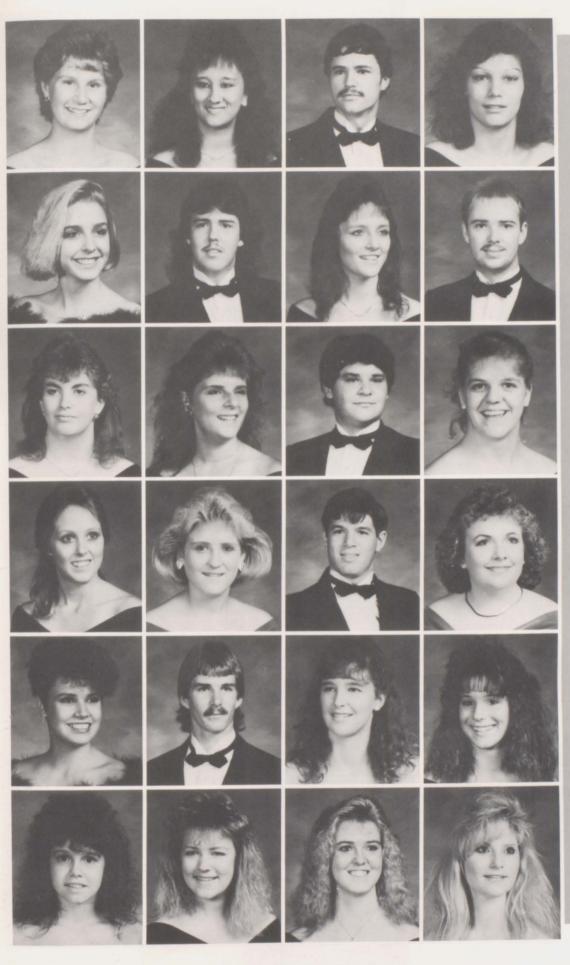

Some had to work extra hard to keep up their grades. "I strive to put my homework as top priority and always try to finish it so that my job will not interfere," said senior Mike Young.

Not all had to work a regular eight-hour shift.

Not all had to work a regular eight-hour shift. Senior Cynthia Smith got an opportunity to work at her father's business, Smith's Shoes to Boots. "Besides giving me experience for the future, working for my father gives me a chance to set my own hours. It is the type of job that you can't be fired or quit from," said Smith.

Not everyone thoroughly enjoyed his job. Senior Joe Holbrook, who works at Dairy Queen, said, "Working really stinks! It takes time away from me that I could be spending with my friends."

erfect Matches Strike Up Every Way

Through the past few years certain people were paired up with their best friend, whether it was their boyfriend, girlfriend, or just their friend.

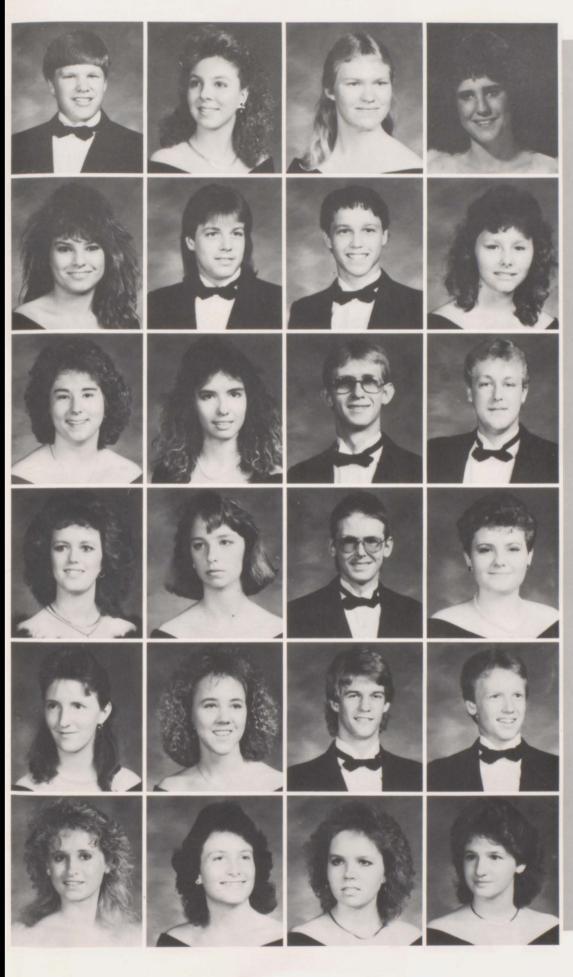

"Dustin is my best friend, he sticks by me. We really have a lot in common. We both like clam chowder, walking in the woods, and we both love each other a lot," said senior Donna Kirkland Davis.

Senior Julie Smith said, "I think Kim Rogers and Trey Turner are the perfect match. They have been dating so long and they're so cute together!"

Seniors Scott VanWinkle and Carolyn Jones had been dating for almost three years and they felt that they were made for one another. Jones said, "We both put each other's best interest before our own. That is one thing that has brought us closer together."

Most students felt that there were several perfect matches in the senior class. Senior Beth Little said, "I know so many people that have been dating for a long time, like me and Johnny. We started dating a long time ago and we have been dating on and off ever since. A perfect match should be together forever and I hope we are!"

Enjoying their trip in New Orleans, senior football players Philip Wyatt, Andy 3ass, Mark Hyder, and Jon Hall stand at the corner of Toulouse and Bourbon Street.

uarterback Club Gives Three-Year Service Awards

After years of football, the senior players were rewarded for their efforts with a trip to the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans. "The senior trip was definitely an experience. Bourbon Street wasn't like anywhere I'd ever been before," said senior player Jon Hall.

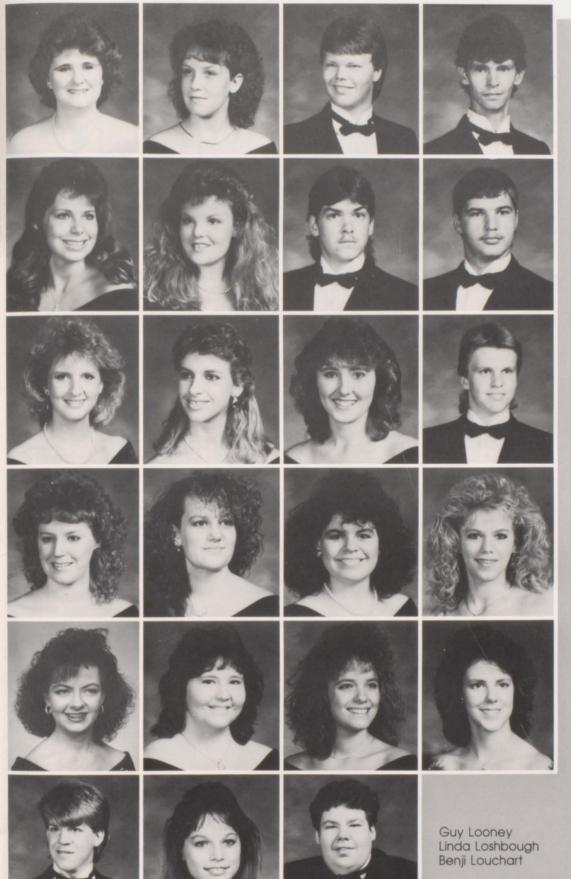

All seniors that had been in the football program for three years were eligible. The trip served as a reason to stay in the program. "It's a great reward and incentive, in that kids have fun and they come back with an education and experience that many of them would have missed out on," said head football coach Dennis Webb.

The Booster club paid for the trip, including lodging and Sugar Bowl tickets. "I hope they continue the tradition of a senior trip," said junior player Buzz Hamby. "After playing together for years the senior trip is a way for us to get together one last time. I can't wait to go next year."

Some of the players wanted to return to New Orleans. "We had a lot of fun. I wish I could go back again," said senior player Chad Cunning-

Senior player Bryan Garrett said, "Receiving our jackets and going on the senior trip makes those days we spent at camp worthwhile, (almost.)"

Foreign exchange students Ulrika Westerlund, Henrik Bengtsson from Sweden; Espen Haugen from Norway; Carles Ferreiro, from Spain; and Pedja Novakovich, from Yugoslavia, find life in America different from life in their home countries. Ferreiro says, "The schools in America are easier, bigger, and you can meet a lot of friends and girls."

oreign Exchange Students Feel the Difference

Exchange students came from many far away places. "I decided to come to America because my friends had visited and said it was an interesting place to go," said senior Espen Haugen.

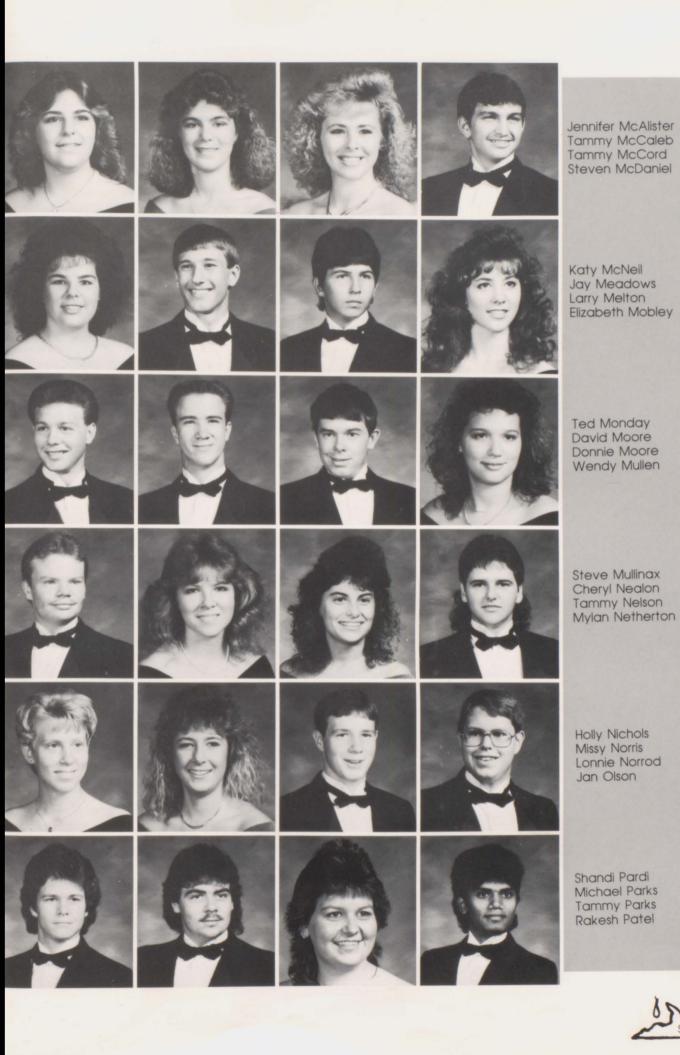

Some of the exchange students felt the change in size of population when they came to Crossville. "I always wanted to come to America, but I had to go from 2 million people to 20 thousand. That was a major change!" said Carles Ferreiro. "Living in a small town is definitely different. Here everyone knows everyone else, but where I come from you hardly have a chance to get to know anyone," said junior Pedja Novakovich.

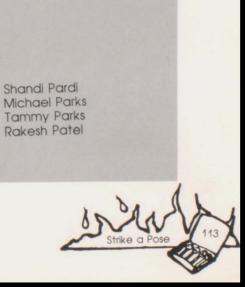

"The school system here is easier than Sweden's. In Sweden the tests are more difficult, and we had more freedom," said senior Henrik Bengtsson. "If I want to have fun, I would stay here, but if I wanted to learn I would go back to Norway," said Haugen.

Both Haugen and Bengtsson agreed that the climate here was much warmer than where they lived. "I enjoy the climate here compared to Norway's cold climate," said Haugen.

The exchange students knew they would have to go home soon, but wanted this to last forever. "I am having a good time here. I know I am going to have to go home, but I don't want to think about it. I want this to last as long as possible," said Ferreiro.

Sickness proves to be the real test for those trying to have perfect attendance. Seniors Shannon Blalock and Timothy Kendrick graduate with 13 years of perfect attendance, and Julie Houston with 12 years. Blalock says, "The only time I didn't want to go to school was when I was sick, but I went anyway because perfect attendance was important to me."

ever-Missed and No Regrets

Seniors Shannon Blalock and Timothy Kendrick graduated with 13 years of perfect attendance, while Julie Houston graduated with 12.

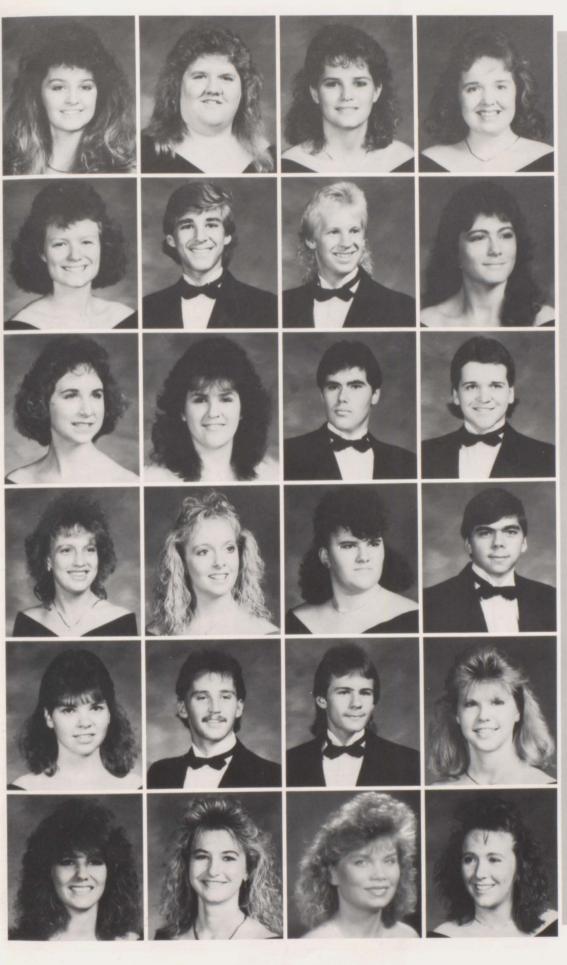

"Going to school didn't seem very hard after I got used to it and now that it's over I feel really good about myself," said Kendrick. "Having 13 years of perfect attendance feels great. It has been an important goal to me, and it feels good to have reached that goal," said Blalock.

Going to school for 13 and 12 years had its advantages. Blalock said, "There are many advantages. The biggest is not having make-up work."

There were few disadvantages of having perfect attendance. "You can't say you did not know about the homework," said Kendrick. "I don't think there are any disadvantages," said Blalock.

All agreed that it was worthwhile and beneficial to them to have perfect attendance. Blalock said, "I think it is worthwhile not to have missed. I feel like I've accomplished something that very few people try to do. I'm proud of it. I'm thankful that God has taken care of me so I was able to go to school everyday. I am blessed."

"Girls' State helped me grow more as a person than anything I have ever experienced," said senior Mika Proffitt. Senior Jon Hall said, "Boys' State was a long hard week, but it was well worth it."

Volunteer Girls' State, (VGS), was held at Middle Tennessee State University while Volunteer Boys' State, (VBS), was held at Tennessee Technological Institute. Both were held June 4-10.

At State, delegates participated in electing city, county, and state officials. They had a first hand view of what it took to run the government. Weidner said, "Building our own state from scratch was an experience that will last a lifetime."

Meadows agreed about Boys' State. Meadows said, "The discipline I learned at Boys' State will help me for the rest of my life." Several of the delegates held offices while at State. Proffitt held the office of State Representative and County General Sessions Judge at VGS while Gayhartheld a State Senator seat at VBS.

Proffitt said, "Holding an office at VGS gives me experience in leadership that helps me in the club offices that I hold in school."

The honor of winning the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citzenship Award was given to Jay Meadows. Meadows says, "I feel privileged to have won this award. It's an honor to know that your peers think you are worthy of such an award."

eadows Merited With Citizenship Award

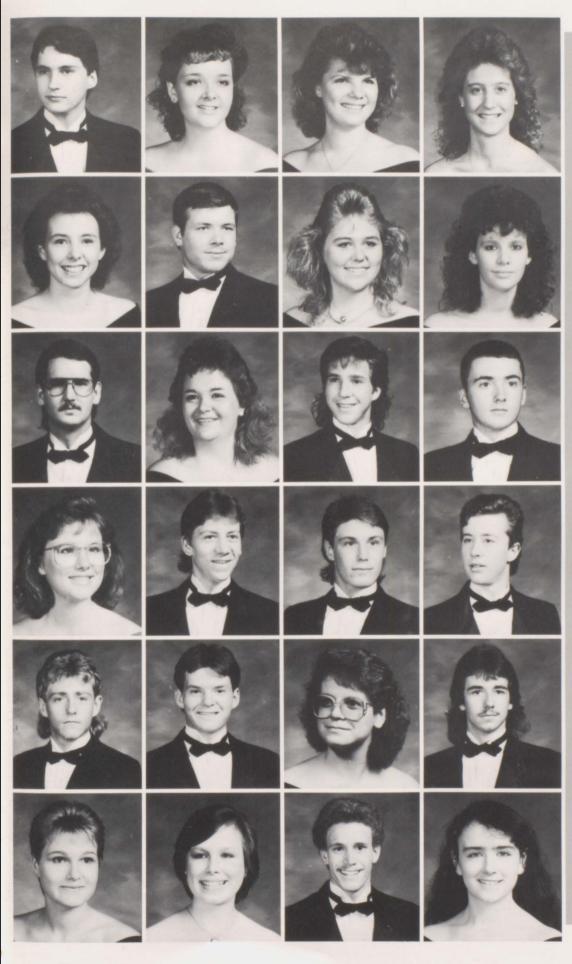

"I think it's a great honor for Mr. Meadows to receive such a prestigious award and I'm just tickled to know him and be able to get his autograph any time I'd like," said classmate senior Steve Hurd.

Three seniors, boy or girl, were chosen by the faculty. The three were Jon Hall, Jason Atkinson, and Meadows. The award was based on academics, patriotism, good citizenship, and contributions to community and school.

One student from each high school in the state won this award. Then the winners competed for a scholarship. Each person sent a transcript of his grades, took a current events test, and told his contributions to his school and community to qualify for the scholarship.

"I am extremely proud of Jay for receiving this award as I have been proud of his accomplishments his entire life. What makes this award special, however, is that it is a recognition from his fellow students and is an indication of the respect he has earned throughout his years in the Cumberland County School System," said Jay's mom and English teacher Elaine Meadows.

eing Top of the Class Shocks Brookes

"At first, I was completely shocked. But, now that I am getting used to the idea — I love it! I am very proud to receive such an honor," said senior valedictorian Karen Brookes.

Brookes balanced a job and band, but still found the time to excel to the top of her class. "I had to make a lot of sacrifices. I lost a lot of sleep because of having to do my homework when I got home from work. I always wanted to be valedictorian so I pushed myself," said Brookes.

She planned to attend the University of Tennesse at Martin and major in Business Adminstra-

"I was motivated by an inner desire to make the most of the talents God gave me and my mother also inspired me to be my best," said Brookes.

H olman Takes Time To Take Salutatorian

Being involved in clubs such as Beta, Interact, Drama, the Academic Competition Team, and many others took a lot of time but didn't stop senior Gretchen Holman from finding time to concentrate on her studies and become salutatorical.

"I was very surprised when I found out that I was salutatorian. I have always put things off until the last minute. This habit has cost me through the years, but fortunately, it didn't hurt my grades too much," said Holman.

Holman said her chief motivation to excel was her father because he always encouraged her to do well. In the future she planned to attend Freed-Hardeman college and receive her preprofessional degree. She hoped to become a pediatrician or a physical therapist.

Students that have a 4.0 and above grade average are considered high honors students. The differences between the averages of the high honors students are sometimes very little and even result in ties. This small difference decides the valedictorian, salutatorian and ranks the other top eight of the class. High Honors: Front row — Gretchen Holman, Karen Brookes, Jeanine Girardi, Regina Selby, Diane Westerfield. Second row — Ronnie Baylosis, Kristie Smith, Mike Turner, Philip Wyatt, Jon Hall, Jay Meadows. Not pictured Crystal Couch.

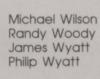

Students that have an average of 3.5 to 3.99 are classified as honors students. Some honors students were very close to graduating with high honors. The small differences in averages cause many honors students to tie with others. Honors: Front row — Jennifer McAlister, Debbie James, Marcy Helton, Nikki Carnes, Cynthia Smith, Linda Barnes, India Brown, Allison Barnwell, Cindy Pugh, Missy Weidner. ff enior football players. Despecially Tom Reed, have a habit of camera hogging during homecoming. Homecoming practice had better weather than homecoming night. Aside from bashing Tom in the head with our umbrella a few hundred times, it was raining so hard I couldn't see what I was doing and I was terrified that I'd stab him in the chest with the colors pin! We could see the headlines, 'Local cheerleader arrested for murder by pierced lung of local football player.''' — Kate Niblick

Leading the class of '90, president Chris Zimmerman, vice-president Stacy Beaty, secretary Suzanne Breeding, and treasurer Tracy Beaty share the responsibilities of the prom and pleasing the junior class. Stacy Beaty says, "It's an honor to lead the junior class. Without the students the class officers couldn't accomplish the things they do throughout the year."

Class Rings Mark the Year

In the fall, juniors chose their class rings and soon every junior was carrying around pamphlets which showed the various designs and colors they could choose

"As I looked through the book I found the one I wanted. It was great to finally get my ring," said junior Criss Woods.

The junior class, following tradition, was in charge of the junior-senior prom. The class officers took over the task of planning for the prom and for raising the necessary mon-

"Being in charge of the prom was a whole lot of work for us, but I feel the prom turned out great!" said junior class secretary Suzanne Breeding.

Shopping for a prom dress was part of the fun. Junior Brucene Wyatt said, "Going to all the malls and dress shops was really tiring, but I feel it was all worth it."

Junior Jerry Smith said, "We take our responsibilities seriously so everyone will have a great year and especially a great prom. The juniors are making school life great!"

Playing the xylophone at a pep rally, junior Julie Emery and senior Karen Brooks help "pep up" the pep rally. Emery says, "This was my first year playing the xylophone. It was fun. It was awesome when the student body started dancing during the homecoming pep rally."

Term Papers Wage War

Junior term papers were one of the most dreaded events of the year. Junior John Harvill said, "I am dreading them, but I want to do them because they could be a good factor for college,"

"Term papers are a waste of time on the part of the teachers and us," said junior Victor Williamson. "I think people will agree with me that doing term papers is a bunch of bull and it uses brain cells that could be used for something else," said junior Frank Copeland.

Advanced English teacher Judy Quillen said, "I'm tired of students' attitudes reflecting the "us against them" philosophy of their relationship with teachers. A good teacher broadens interests, experiences, and backgrounds. A research paper on a topic chosen by the student can do this. This process builds library skills, organizational skills, logical thinking, critical analysis, and other upper level cognitive skills that are necessary for intelligent, selective thought, and interaction.

"Students choose to be in Advanced English III. I wish more of them would choose excellence. A commitment to excellence should be an unsigned pact between all advanced students and their teachers."

Wheels Mean Freedom

For many students, their junior year was the year that they were able to forget about catching the bus and depending on their parents for transportation, because they now had a car of their own.

Junior Robin Pugh said, "I couldn't wait until I was a junior because I knew I would finally get a car and no longer have to ride the bus. Now I burn up the road in my own car."

Junior Kelly Matherly said, "I have an '86 Pontiac Firebird. I love being able to drive myself around and not having to rely on other people to get me there. I used to hate being dropped off by my mom, but now I can drive myself anywhere I want."

Some students had to work for their car. "I had to work and pay for it, but by having a vehicle I feel I have more freedom and can do what I want," said junior Jake Turner.

Many were glad to get whatever they could. "I'm grateful to have a car, but even though it's an old Mercedes, I would like to get rid of it, because the radio doesn't work and the air conditioner and heater are screwed up. So if anyone is interested in buying a Mercedes just talk to me," said junior Chris Zimmerman.

Junior Trina Hinch said, "My car might not be a Mercedes but it sure beats riding the school bus."

Underclassmen Fill Empty Positions

"The juniors played an active role in the football program. They will become the seniors for the next season, and have responsibility to become the leaders for the team and set an example for the young members to follow," said junior John Harvill. Juniors made contributions to football as well as other sports.

The varsity cheerleading squad was dominated by juniors. Out of the ten cheerleaders eight were juniors.

Junior Suzanne Breeding said, "Since we are pretty much in the same class, we're involved in other activities together besides cheerleading. It helps us get along better."

Juniors were also an important part of the volleyball team. Junior volleyball team member Kelly Matherly said, "Throughout the volleyball season, three or four juniors started in each game. As juniors, we all worked very hard to earn our positions and this will give us the advantage next year."

Many juniors felt that participating in sports helped them prepare for the future. Junior basketball player Cheryl Page said, "As a junior I feel that I have to keep improving my talents as a basketball player to reach my future goals."

Performing CPR on a dummy in health, junior Todd Roysdon demonstrates the proper technique for his first period class. "Learning CPR may be very helpful in the future, but performing CPR on a dummy in front of my class was very embarrassing," says Roysdon.

'Dressed to Mood'

"I usually dress according to the mood I'm in — when in a good mood, I dress bright. When I'm in a bad mood I usually don't care what I wear," said junior Charleen Smith.

"I like being myself, just hanging around in my old holy Levi's and being comfortable and fashionable at the same time," said junior Kate Niblick.

Old holy jeans, big sweaters, solid color outfits, plaid slacks, penny loafers, mismatched sweaters, cardigan sweaters and turtlenecks were in style. "There is such a variety of things to wear that there isn't one thing that everybody has to have. I can choose one way to dress and stick to that way for the rest of the year, if I want," said junior Shannon Turner.

Attitude glasses, prescription and non-prescription, were a new trend. "I like my big blue preppy glasses. I never thought I'd wear glasses, now I'm wearing them even without a prescription," said junior Missy Peek.

Sophomores

President Tara Nelson, vice president Shannon Isaacson, secretary Jessica Gayhart, and treasurer Jerry Mifflin lead the class of '91.

Officers Boost Sagging Spirit

Boosting the sophomore's spirit, class officers joined in and influenced sophomores to join in many competitions against the junior and senior classes.

Secretary Jessica Gayhart said, "Our class was hard to get motivated and pepped up, but when they were it was areat!"

Class officers had many responsibilities, such as building floats, having fund raisers, and maintaining class spirit.

"As class officers, we let the sophomores know what was going on," said president Tara Nelson.

Newcomers Find Transitions Tricky

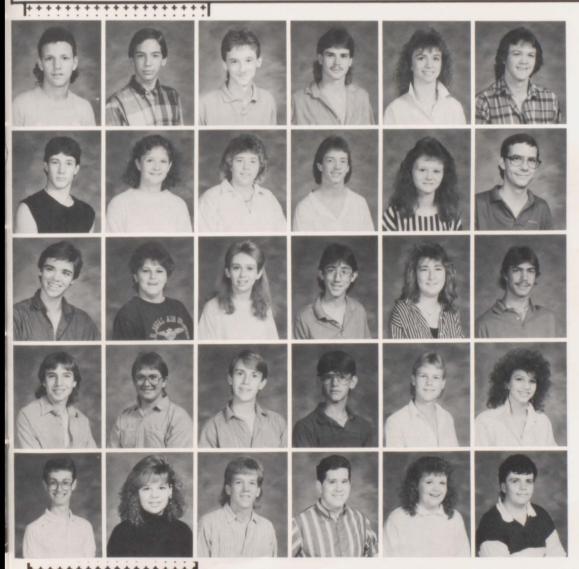

Besides moving to a new building, the sophomores faced changes in teachers, schedules, lunch times, and most of all, friends.

Sophomore Michael Wells said, "The hardest thing about being a sophomore is that everyone picks on you unless you have friends that are upper classmen."

With all the academic changes came a change in treatment. Sophomores were no longer the "Big Guys on Campus." Sophomore Kim Tabor said, "It feels like I'm the squirt of the school and the big guys are giants!"

Sophomores were everywhere — in the halls, typing class, choir. They found safety in numbers. Sophomores outnumbered juniors and seniors. They filled the upper bleachers while both the junior and senior classes sat on the lower bleachers.

Sophomore G.G. Lewis said, "Despite the difficult problems I faced with homework, tests, etc., one thing I could always look forward to was making new friends."

Staying for basketball practice makes transportation harder for sophomores like Henry Sedgebeer and Chad Landers.

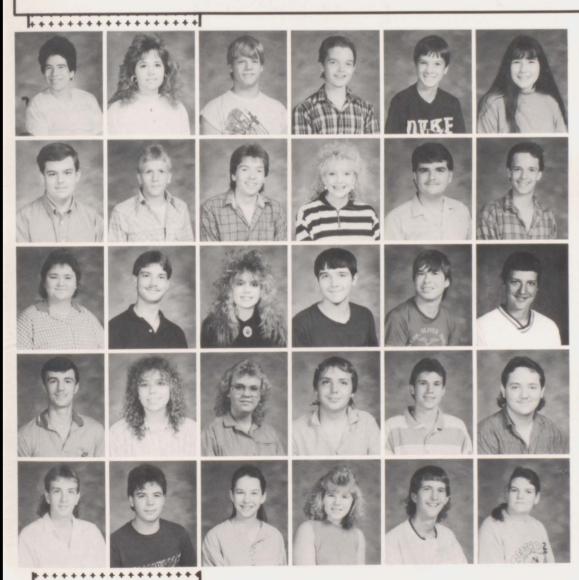

Non-Drivers Get Bus-Riding Blues

Sophomores had a hard time getting to and from school unless they had their drivers' license and a car. Many of them had not turned sixteen yet, and transportation became a problem.

Many sophomores had older brothers, sisters, other relatives, or friends who had their license and a car. Sophomore Buffi Cox said, "Being able to ride with my older sister enables me to sleep late, because I don't have to ride the bus."

After school many students wanted other rides home other than the bus. Sophomore Vanessa Bell said, "Having to ride the bus makes going to my locker after school almost impossible."

Riding to school with friends gave students more time to meet and talk. Sophomore Amy Wilson said, "I enjoy spending time with my friends, and riding to school with them gives me that time."

Dating Choices Leave Many Undecided

In the beginning some dating sophomores planned to stay together for their high school years, and maybe even get married, but some saw disadvantages to steady dating. Sophomore Tara Nelson said, "It's nice to always have a steady date, but sooner or later you can get tired of just one person."

Other sophomores felt too young to be serious in a relationship. "This is the time to go out, have fun, and not worry about so many commitments," said sophomore Mandy Zimmerman.

"It's a personal choice to date steadily or date around. There are pros and cons. I think it all depends on how you feel about an individual. You may find the person of your dreams and stay together — but you could be making a big mistake," said sophomore Travis Christopher.

According to senior Jeff Gayhart, sophomore flag member Stacy Gale only dates him for his Nova with the brown door.

'Look of '89' Chooses Gayhart

"It was exciting for me because I was less experienced than the other girls. I didn't expect to win." But sophomore Jessica Gayhart did win "The Look of '89" modeling search sponsored by WOKI radio and Rasnic School of Modeling.

The Gayhart family supported and kept interested in Jessica's hobby. "My parents and my brother and sister have all been very supportive. My sister Jennifer found out I won over the radio and she hung up a sign on the Pleasant Hill road sign that said 'Congratulations.' That meant a lot coming from her," said Gayhart.

Gayhart's brother, senior Jeff Gayhart, said, "Jessica knows that we're all proud of her — even though I still think I'm better looking."

Sophomore Jessica Gayhart, who won the "Look of '89" modeling contest, says, "I've been in many local pageants and I've always placed, but never won."

Students Get a Taste of the Unusual

Out of the Ordinary

"Funny and weird things that were learned in classes this year and in previous years made our classes more interesting and our loads a little easier," said senior Deone Selby.

In English teacher Jane Parris's early-bird class, Parris informed the class of a time when she saw a UFO with red, white, and blue flashing lights. Senior Missy Weidner said, "I had always thought that Mrs. Parris was a pretty sane person until she told us about seeing a UFO. Then I wondered if the fact that she sniffed coffee beans had anything to do with the UFO."

English teacher Elaine Meadows said, "The funniest thing I've ever taught was when I had several students from 'the North."

These students received a lesson in 'Southern English.' I wanted their education to be complete.''

Coach Mark Bray was known to tell a few stories. Sophomore Tonya Duff said, "When Coach told us the story about Egghead Eddy, I remembered it because it was so funny. The next day there was a question about Egghead on our test." Bray said that the funniest thing he ever taught in class was the courtship ritual of the Northern Plains Prairie Chickens.

One unusual thing that was taught in class was the art of making slime. Senior Kim Rogers said, "Mrs. Mayfield mixed something together to make green slime. Everyone in class got a little to play with."

"I would sell the shirt off my back to make the customers happy," says marketing director J.D. Atkinson. He and junior Michelle Davis sell a t-shirt to juniors Sandy Elmore and Sue Griffin.

Music Lightens Atmosphere

Working to a Beat

"It's brilliant, exciting, and relaxing. It's music in the classroom," said junior Polly Tuttle. More than any other year, music rapidly became a vital tool in the classroom atmosphere. Teachers discovered that music was a very effective method of teaching.

From French music to classical music our halls rang with a new sound. "Students were ignited, teachers were hot and the year had a melody in the air," said senior April Carr.

French II teacher Mrs. Jane Parris said, "My students were French rockers. They sang 'l'enfant au Walkman' and 'Tout mais pas ca!' in the halls."

"Students reacted positively to the music in the classroom," said Chemistry and Biology II teacher Mrs. Barbara Mayfield.

French II student Michael Wilson said, "Music was great because it taught us a different side. It opened our eyes to another country's culture and gave me a new outlook on studying."

Not only was music a new method of teaching, it became a break from the daily routine. Advanced American History teacher Mrs. Audrey Akins said, "Playing classical music was one of the 'extras' I got from teaching. I believe that it helped all of us settle down.

As a result of the music in the classroom, the atmosphere became lighter. Senior Regina Selby said, "Music in the classroom made it easier for me to concentrate."

With the Christmas concert coming, choir director Marty Gibson gets even a bit more "nutso." "What do you mean you don't want to sing?" says Gibson.

Students End Up on Front Line

History & Grenades

"It's safe in my room ... well, depending on what you're doing. For instance, if you are sleeping ...," said history teacher J.C. Davis, "I wouldn't take it lightly." Senior Shane Turner said, "If you plan on sleeping in Mr. Davis's room, be sure to watch for flying books."

During the second semester, many students became paranoid, knowing that Davis might have something off the wall planned.

"I was always sure that my desk was booby-trapped — you never know what to expect from Mr. Davis," said junior Tara Hall.

"The dummy hand grenades are part fun, and part learning experience. I want the students in my classroom to know how it feels to be susceptable to death at all times. When I'm teaching World War II or Viet-Nam — that's when to watch out. My classroom becomes the front line of fire.

"My room is safe for the most part. One time while demonstrating the use of black powder and Civil War muskets, I forgot that I had loaded one of the guns, and I blew one of the ceiling tiles away. I don't imagine those students have forgotten that," said Davis.

A-wing classes are often subject to the "booms!" coming from the end of the hall. History teacher Evelyn Hargis said, "A-wing teachers are used to Mr. Davis now, but it was startling to hear a grenade go off while watering a plant."

Anticipating another funny anecdote from Mr. Davis, his American History class laughs and learns. "I've learned a lot in Mr. Davis's class. He really knows how to keep things, well, interesting. It's safe in his room ... for now," says junior Rick Whisnant.

Doing what she enjoys, English teacher Judy Quillen says, "My rewards in teaching are words like, 'I really enjoyed your class.'"

Teachers Praise Their Profession

A Career of Rewards

"There are always those moments when former students come back and say 'thanks, you helped me.' That's what makes teaching worthwhile," said science teacher Annel Shaffer. Advanced history teacher Audrey Akins said, "Watching students' improvements and feeling that I've helped is very rewarding."

Teachers had few regrets in their decision of a career. "I regret that school doesn't continue year round. To relieve the agony of summer vacation I go to the park and pretend I'm on playground duty, hang out in public restrooms, harass smokers, and call up strangers and beg them to curse me as if I were their children's teacher," said English teacher Carol James.

Teachers had learned several things after they had been teaching for a couple of years. "Teaching has made me much more tolerant and understanding," said math teacher Velma Buck.

"We need some more really sharp people in teaching, but a college degree in most other areas practically guarantees a better income than one usually finds in teaching. I would like my children to enjoy the good things about teaching, but I do not want them to have a lifetime of financial worries," said Akins.

Taking a moment to relax, English teacher Lou Crowder says, "Education must drastically change if students are to progress or if teachers are to stay in the profession."

'Pie in the Face' Breaks Monotony

Humor for a Reason

"I'm the math King!" exclaimed Cam Stinnett after spending an hour trying to figure out how "x" could be a number. "Sometimes humor gets in the way of learning, but it keeps things interesting. Like a pie in the face, humor breaks down barriers of communication," said science teacher Colleen Wallace.

"Humor is an important element in class," said chemistry teacher Barbara Mayfield. "It helps bridge the generation gap. Humor is the ultimate attention getter."

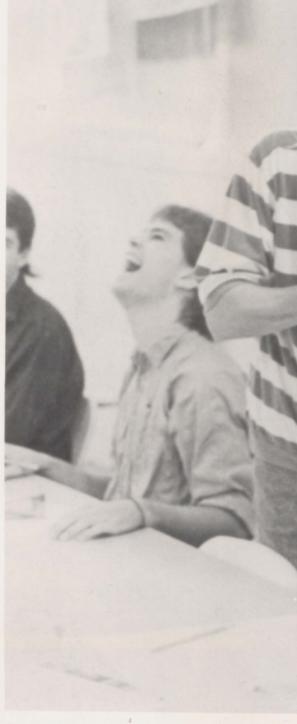

Many teachers felt that classrooms had become more open to humor. Biology teacher Annel Shaffer said, "I think the lifting of the demerit system has given the school a lift. The attitudes of teachers and students alike have become more relaxed."

Shaffer added, "I'm not sure I'll forget telling the whole class that we would use one of my female student's buns in class while studying mold and fungi (She had brought some moldy hamburger buns). The whole class cracked."

English teacher Jane Parris said, "Between Jennifer Gayhart calling me an 'old, coffee bean sniffing hippie' and Earl Patton breaking a tense moment with the only French he knew, "Mon crayon est grand, mon crayon est jeune," (My pencil is big and yellow), my early-bird class had an unforgettable time."

During art class, junior Nick Harris takes time out from creating illustrious art works to correct art teacher Jane Armes. "I said pen and ink, not all in pink," says Harris. Senior Kevin Capps says, "Mrs. Armes always keeps us laughing. She makes learning art really fun. Nick on the other hand is detrimental to my learning environment."

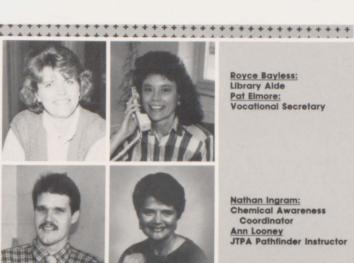

In the "Don't Rain on my Parade" parade, FFA sponsor Alfred Gilliam and English teacher Elaine Meadows, along with several FFA clowns, seniors Tammy Adams, Palla Hassler, and Darrell Beaty, are glad they don't have to walk. Meadows says, "Mr. Gilliam is such a cut-up. Who else but Alfred would drive this crazy 'mule' in a parade."

Going to McDonald's[®] is almost as much a part of school as going to class. You've made us the place to meet, to talk, to have a good time, to celebrate your victories and help forget defeats.

You've made McDonald's more than just another place to eat. And that's why, at McDonald's, we say...

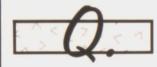

IT'S A GOOD TIME FOR THE GREAT TASTE

Proofreading a story, staff adviser Janet Bass and senior staff member India Brown discuss what changes need to be made. "Fixing what I write is harder than writing," says Brown.

e, the staff, felt that even though our high school years were a time for fun and experimentation with new things, we had a lot of serious choices to make. Not only did we have to deal with issues such as AIDS, drugs, and teen pregnancy, but we had to begin making career choices. We realized that many of these choices we were forced to make were life threatening, but all the choices we made had a major effect on our lives.

Yes, we were playing with matches, our choice or not. Many of us got burned for getting too close to the fire, still we had to move forward through the fire, because new fires were closing in from behind. The generations before had weathered their social problems, and though their issues may have seemed less fatal than those of the '80's, our predecessors survived.

- Aution Later Could

Concentrating on the closing paragraph of her news story, staff member Junior Cyndl Young says, "Writing news stories is a lot of work, but when you see your story in print you know the work was worth it."

Helping staff member junior Chris Caruthers get started on the computer, editor senior Crystal Couch says, "You have to put the disk in the computer before trying to print your story!"

reparation for the 1988-89 Plateau began before the school year started when some members of the staff attended the Jostens Yearbook Camp. Senior staff member Becky Burgess said, "We came up with our hot theme 'Playing with Matches.' " 'Little did we know that every other word that popped out of our mouths would have to do with smoke, fire, matches, burning, or striking," said senior Earl Patton.

Many improvements were made to help the staff achieve their goal of producing a good yearbook. Senior yearbook editor Crystal Couch said, "A Macintosh computer was added to go a long with all the other computers. New tables also provided extra work room."

"The Macintosh helped to improve the quality of the newspaper, even though it took a long time to show the staff members how to use it. Our goal was to make the paper better and more widespread throughout the school. After getting the Macintosh, that goal was easier to achieve," said Contrail editors Kim Bristow and Cindy Pugh.

Senior staff member India Brown said, "Even with the new improvements the tasks were not easy. Many long, hot afternoons and weekends were spent on F-wing keeping the fire and energy of the staff burning."

Teaching senior Earl Patton to use the new MacIntosh computer proves to be a tough job for seniors Cindy Pugh and Kim Bristow. "Learning to use the Macintosh ourselves was hard enough, but teaching Earl is almost impossible," says Bristow.

UNDER FIRE

s long as the struggles of human history have been recorded, man has been in constant, sometimes frantic search for a better world, for a utopia.

To reach this utopia, we too had boundaries to overcome such as AIDS, teen pregnancy, and drugs. Senior Melanie Garrett said, "Our generation has tougher situations than ones before. We have a lot of pressures and decisions to make that can even become life threatening."

A major challenge we had to face was the choice of a career for our future. Senior Denton Brock said, "Deciding what to do with my future is probably the hardest decision I will ever have to make. A lot of pressure is on me to make the right decision."

Senior David Bilbrey said, "The decisions that we make now will affect us for the rest of our lives. We have to accept our responsibility and realize that the choices we make now are important and may even make a difference in the world around us."

Sitting in the "convincer" sophomore Angel Shupe learns the importance of the safety of seat belts. Driver's Ed. teacher Dennis Webb says, "I think the 'convincer' changed our students attitudes in a more positive direction about the safety of seat belts."

Looking at the hot prospects to eat as they wait in the salad bar line, sophomore Rhonda Smith and senior Renee Imes have to decide which foods to choose. Imes says, "The salad bar is really handy when you are in a hurry and only want something light to eat." Seniors Shandi Pardi, Kara Kerley, Christina Davis, Allison Barnwell, Beth Little, Jyl King, and Krista Kerley get all fired up in the spirit of a pep rally. Barnwell says, "The Homecoming pep rally was awesome. Everyone got involved and the whole gym was rocking."

Gonging in the "Gong Show," seniors Tom Reed and Jennifer Gayhart cannot believe some of the acts that they have to judge. Reed says, "This is too much! Benji 'The Big Laguna' Louchart and The Waves are great!"

Taking part in a traditional tea ceremony, Ms. Kaye Randolph's foods class learns different Japanese customs from Mariko, a volunteer for "Never Again," a group of citizens advocating world peace.

Reading the Stock Market Game Report in economics class, senior David Daugherty says, "Well, again I see we're 146 on the scale, thanks to our stock market queen Ms. Amy Campbell."

Escaping the definitions and theories of advanced economics, senlor Denton Brock enjoys his spare time by indulging in a book for his own pleasure.

earning that the economy could collapse at any moment is too serious and scary for my brain. I just have to kick back and read a book for fun and worry about economics later," says senior Denton Brock.
