There is a more varied way in which lockdowns are conducted currently – with more practice focusing on different areas of the school and at different times.
- Assisted and Unassisted Grading: Unassisted work consisting of tests, quizzes, essays and projects will make up 70% of a student's grade. Assisted work consisting of classwork, group work, and homework will count for 30% of a student's grade. This is due to the importance of the fact that students must show mastery of standards on the state summative test working in an independent manner.

This intervention is now done before the option of Special Education comes in to play. The team will have a universal screener who will monitor students as to how many F's they have, attendance, and missing assignments. Tier 1 will be the first step where the teacher observes and monitors in their classrooms. Tier 2 is then implemented with two options: study lunch – where the student will do their homework in a classroom during lunch hour; the second option - targeted tutoring is done Wednesday and Thursday evenings.
