Toolbox helps us all to be strong, effective, and kind. The man who created TOOLBOX, Mark A. Collin, developed the program to help us all "foster children's abilities to manage their own emotional, social and academic success" by learning, practicing, and utilizing the "tools" that already exist inside of us. The more our students practice using their tools, the better they get at using them. Practicing at home, at school and in the community helps everyone and improves relationships, self-awareness, and self-regulation. We can all learn by using our tools every day.

TOOLBOX Teaches Children to:

- Realize their innate goodness and intrinsic wholeness
- Belong and contribute their uniqueness
- Achieve emotional balance and emotional intelligence (in 3-5 seconds)
- Be proactive rather than reactive
- Organize and understand their internal experiences (self-knowing)
- Care for themselves and experience empathy for others
- Understand and make sense of what is going on around them
- Find their voice and speak up
- Listen to their inner voice non-judgmentally and make fair self-assessme
- Let the little things go
- Use time wisely
- Be grateful and give thanks from a place of authenticity
- Be forgiving when it is time
- Apologize when aware of harming others
- Understand the value and intelligence of patience
- Be courageous when others are not using their Tools
