CARROLLTON

Along that less worn path,

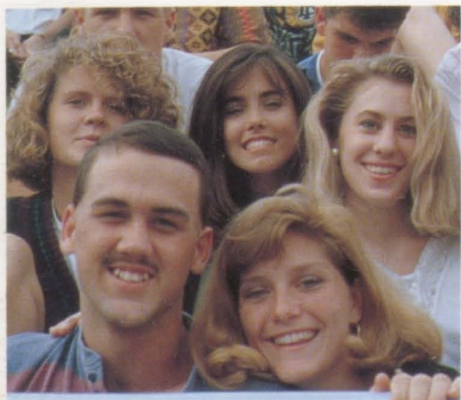

An old bridge tirelessly arches

Over a cool clear brook.

Somehow I always pause to look

And I wonder

Why stop here?

Here is always changing

From a time with friends,

Where life is predictable,

To a period of growth

For the future.

Why stop here?

WHAT IF I DIE?

That's the question that concerns every person who thinks about buying life insurance. To us, it's the most important question because the financial security of American families depends on it.

That's why we recommend replacing cash value life insurance with inexpensive term insurance. Our clients are able to afford more death protection. Term is the only kind of insurance we sell. It's the only kind we would think of selling. And in 1989, we sold more face amount of individual life insurance than any company in the world (cash value coverage included).

Below are just a few of the people who decided to look past the claims of our competitors and listen to A.L. Williams. Chances are, their cash value life insurance agent never talked to them about term insurance (the commissions on cash value insurance are much greater).

Do we believe in replacement? You bet your life we do.
