

G. W. Carver Elementary School
6 E. Fourth Street
Salem, Virginia

The Carver School opened in 1940 to serve African American students in grades 1-12 from throughout the region. In 1966, the Carver School became Salem Intermediate due to the integration of Roanoke County Schools. In 1977, the school was again renamed, this time as G. W. Carver Elementary. The Carver Reunion Association, composed of former teachers and students, requested the reversion to the school's original name, and they rallied to keep Carver from being closed in 1983, and again in 1994. In 1983 it became one of four elementary schools in Salem when the city formed its own school system, and in 1997 extensive renovations and additions were completed.
