The EdLeader Promise Network

The EdLeader Promise Network is the national evolution of AASA's earlier "Learning 2025" work and now serves as a collaborative network for superintendents and district leadership teams focused on future-ready public education systems.

In Western Pennsylvania, this work became widely known through the Future-Driven Schools initiative, formerly called the "Western PA Learning 2025 Alliance." The regional effort is coordinated through partnerships among 47 school districts across the southwest region of Pennsylvania focused on innovation, collaboration, and preparing students for success in an ever-changing world.

The Frazier School District is proud to be a member of this collaborative network, working alongside neighboring districts to support student-centered learning, workforce readiness, community partnerships, and future-driven educational practices that benefit all students.

Largely funded through generous grants provided by The Grable Foundation, the Frazier School District has once again been given the opportunity to participate in the initiative during the 2026–2027 school year.

On Thursday, May 14, 2026, representatives from the 47 participating districts gathered at the Kamin Science Center in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania to collaborate, share ideas, and engage in professional learning opportunities centered around future-driven education.

Keynote speaker Dr. Carrie Rowe inspired educational leaders through her message of innovation, perseverance, and collaboration while also addressing many of the challenges school districts across the Commonwealth are preparing to face during the upcoming school year.
