MASON'S MEMO

A Present vs. Your Presence

The Christmas season is a very special one to most of us. No matter your background or beliefs, most people enjoy the twinkling lights, special songs, great foods, time spent with family, and of course, presents. There are so many fun events, school activities, and holiday parties to attend that it seems as though the month of December is over before we turn around. As we enter this busy season let's remember that our presence in the lives of our children is much more important than the presents that we buy them. When your child is performing in the Christmas concert, opening gifts or enjoying hot chocolate and a movie at home, make sure to be mentally present and enjoying the moment. It's tempting to let your mind wander to your endless to-do list but you will regret not giving each moment that you can to your child. It's also tempting to watch life through our phones as we video or take pictures. Let me encourage you to snap a few pics, then put your phone away and enjoy the moment.

This holiday season give your child the best gift of all, your presence.
