Houston College and Career Academy Culinary Arts Program Earns Industry Certification

Pictured above, left to right are: Dana Nagy-Baldwin (Accreditation Program Administrator), David McDermott (CTAE Director), Chef Wilson, Dr. Sherry Johnson (HCCA Principal), Chef Jason de la Sota (Advisory Council member), Chef Alessia O'Dell (Guest Chef Evaluator), Chef Gearry (Culinary Department Head, Savannah Tech College), and Dr. Tonya Wallace (HCCA Assistant Principal).

The Houston College and Career Academy Culinary Arts Program earned their Industry Certification. The American Culinary Education Foundation Accrediting Commission (ACFEF AC) and their sub-committees met on January 14, 2023, to review the accreditation team report from the October site visit. The purpose of the visit was to review the Culinary/Baking and Pastry Program. It was happily reported that the American Culinary Education Foundation Accreditation/Industry Certification was granted. The evaluation team's review of the program listed the following strengths:

- Chef Wilson is a devoted and passionate instructor and an asset to the program and her students.
- The administration is supportive and has invested in the future of the program.
- The faculty is dedicated to student success.
- Georgia Chef's Foundation is supportive and actively participates in the Culinary Program.
- Students have great respect for their instructor and are enthusiastic about the program.

The students in the program were faced with the challenge of impressing the evaluation team. Before the on-site visit, documents and standards were uploaded for Evaluation Team review and approval. In preparation for the on-site visit the students were tasked with the development of a dish that could be well executed but also appealing to the eye. Students brainstormed for weeks with their peers to decide on the perfect dish. Eventually the time came, and their hearts were set on a red velvet waffle with fried chicken and collard greens on the side. It was also topped with candy bacon and homemade maple syrup. Students prepared for weeks with some trial and error, but the students persevered, and the dish was served perfectly on the day of the site visit.

The American Culinary Education Foundation (ACF) Evaluation Team arrived, and students were way beyond excited to serve the dish they had worked so hard on. The students were given the opportunity to execute the dish and they passed the test with excellence. Members of the Evaluation Team and guests in attendance made comments such as, "Amazing" and "Tasty" to describe the dishes the students had prepared.

Chef Suni Wilson is the Culinary Arts Instructor at Houston College and Career Academy.
