Chemics, TODAY is your last chance to learn more about Native American culture during both lunches. This is also your final chance to earn a "ticket" to the viewing of Dances with Wolves that will be shown this Wednesday during hours 1-3. This will be school-excused for you as long as your teachers approve. What will we be watching today? You will learn about the significance of hair and braiding for Native Americans. You will also see a video about the tradition of the Native American Hoop Dance affiliated with the Lumbee Tribe of North Carolina. Please grab your lunch and friends and join us in the Little Theatre at 11:00 a.m. and 12:00 p.m. TODAY!

Tomorrow, during both lunches, P2P will have a bingo activity in Eyeball Alley. The topics for the Bingo session will help us all learn more about depression and the importance of active listening. Please join us in Eyeball at 11:05 and 12:05. You could win prizes and more importantly, you could learn more about mental wellness.

It is MHS MISSION MONDAY!

“Everything we do is a representation of Chemic Pride”. Chemics are “open-minded”.

Open-mindedness is the exact opposite of someone who refuses to entertain any idea other than their own. Being open-minded allows you to explore new frontiers, discover new perspectives, and understand other people’s cultures and beliefs. Of course, it does not mean you will believe what they do—it only means you are willing to listen without arguing. Here are some examples of open-mindedness.

How will you show that you are an Open Minded Chemic this week?
