

What is child find? Child find refers to the policies and procedures in each state that ensure that all children with disabilities, birth through age 21, who live in the state and are in need of special education and related services or early intervention services are identified, located and evaluated.

The Facts you should know:

- Child find procedures may include public announcements through newspaper, television, radio; meetings with private and home school representatives/organizations; use of websites; community service fairs, parent mentors and collaboration with other public agencies.
- Local school systems are responsible for all children within their jurisdiction suspected of having disabilities including:
  - Preschool children, ages 3 through 5, including those in private preschools or child care programs
  - Children enrolled in public school within the district, including public charter schools
  - Children who are placed in private schools within the district
  - Children who live within the jurisdiction of the local school system and are home-schooled
  - Highly mobile children, including migrant, homeless and children who are wards of the state
  - Children who are served in community programs such as rehabilitation centers, child care centers, etc.
  - Children who are incarcerated in facilities operated by the local sheriff's office or other municipalities
  - Children in state juvenile (Department of Juvenile Justice, DJJ) or correctional (Department of Corrections, DOC) facilities
  - Any other children suspected of having disabilities, even when those children may be progressing from grade to grade.
- In Georgia, home-schooled children are treated as private school children in regard to special education and must be considered for proportionate share of federal funds for private school children.
- Public charter schools that are their own school system are responsible for child find for children enrolled in the charter school.
- Georgia DJJ and Georgia DOC are responsible for child find for youth in their facilities.
- Local school systems are responsible for child find for youth in jails or other correctional facilities operated by local municipalities.
