Anise is a surfer and spends her days on the beach with her friends catching waves. During the summer of her senior year, Anise is excited to spend the last summer before college with her friends. She's doing what she loves and has started talking to one of her best guy friends. But everything changes when her aunt gets into a terrible car accident leaving her in the hospital unable to care for her three kids. Now Anise has to travel to Nebraska to help her aunt take care of her cousins. She's away from her friends, her almost boyfriend, and the ocean she loves so much. Will she be able to salvage the summer babysitting in Nebraska? Will she find a new hobby or a new love interest? This unexpected move will have more adventure than Anise could have ever been prepared for.

8. What quote from the book meant something to you and why? *

"Good things are infinite too" pg 171. There are always going to be bad things that happen throughout life. However, just like there could be infinite bad things, there are good things that happen through life too. Instead of focusing on the negative that could have happened, it's better to focus on the positives that have happened and are yet to come.

9. If you could choose a song as the theme for this book what would it be and why? *

If I chose a song to be the theme of this novel it would be "Begin Again" by Taylor Swift. This song talks about a relationship between two people and how this relationship is better than the one that she was previously in. When I listened to the lyrics it made me think of Anise and how her relationship with Lincoln seemed to make her happier than the situation that she had with Eric.
