School Choice Measure Advancing in Congress Could Help Parents Pay for Faith-Based Education

Republicans in Congress are taking steps to advance President Trump's goal of establishing "universal school choice."

In the House of Representatives, lawmakers are aiming to allocate up to $5 billion a year for scholarships to help families send their children to private schools, including faith-based ones. Most American households would qualify, as long as their income is less than three times the local median income.

Highlights from Letters to Power 88

Your station has meant so much to me these past few months. I had not listened to it before because I was a backslidden Christian. It took losing my business, my family, etc. to wake me up. I know that my Lord has forgiven me even though many folks have not. Day and night, your station blesses me. Keep up what you are doing. You have no idea what you mean to someone who is hurting and lonely. In the near future, as the Lord blesses I plan to support your station financially. Until that time though be sure that I am lifting you up in prayer. Thanks again and God bless you all.
