It was a thought and dream in 1982 but Louis chalk made it happen. The Berryville Ballpark was on its way. Field one was built by Louis Chalk and a good friend Gordon with ladders ropes and an old dodge van. Working all day at the Chevrolet house and all evening at the ballpark was the normal for Mr.Chalk. When the field was built it was kept up with a Honda push mower that him and Gordon took turns every fifteen minutes. In 1986 field two was built the same way Mr. Louis Chalk and his good friend Gordon with ladders and ropes and an old dodge van. With the concession stand famous ballpark burger and fry's is what brought field three to where we are today. Your thought and dream and many love offerings has brought pride and joy to this community to share for a lifetime. I Brian Taylor

Dear Members of the Frankston High School Wall of Honor Committee,

I am writing to wholeheartedly support the nomination of Mr. Louis Chalk for the esteemed Wall of Honor at Frankston High School. Louis Chalk's life and work represent the very best qualities of community dedication, selflessness, and leadership, making him a deserving candidate for this recognition.

Mr. Chalk's story begins in Frankston around 1945. By 1950, he was already contributing to the local economy, working at the Tomato Shed. In 1952, he joined Nig White's service station and, in December 1967, took his expertise to Austin, where he ran a service station. However, his heart was always in Frankston. In August 1973, Louis returned to Frankston to serve as the Service Manager at Bacon Chevrolet. Tragically, just five days into his new role, he was involved in a devastating automobile and train accident. Though he miraculously survived, the accident left him with a two-week memory gap, erasing his last week in Austin and his first week back in Frankston.

Despite this life-altering event, Mr. Chalk remained steadfast in his commitment to the community. One of his most enduring legacies is the creation of the Lenore-Berry Baseball Park in Berryville. In 1982, recognizing the need for a dedicated space for children to play baseball, Louis took it upon himself to turn this dream into a reality. Mr. Berry generously donated the land, and Louis secured the necessary grants. Over the next five years, with the help of Gordon Pomplan and numerous volunteers, Louis physically built the park, often working tirelessly before and after his full-time job from Monday through Saturday and dedicating his entire Sundays to the effort.

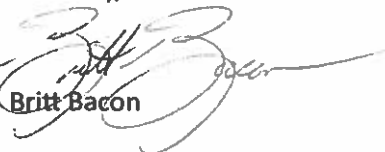

The impact of Lenore-Berry Baseball Park has been extraordinary. Thousands of children from the community have had access to quality baseball and softball facilities because of Louis's vision and dedication. In 1987, when Lon Morris College needed a field for their baseball team, the park became their home for seven years. When Frankston High School built its new campus in 1988, the baseball field there served as a practice and playing field until the construction of the new baseball and softball complex in 2014. My oldest son, Bryson, even had the privilege of playing on that field during his freshman year.

Louis and his wife, Patsy, exemplified community spirit by running the concession stand at the park for many years, using the proceeds to support the ballpark. Thanks to Louis's selfless efforts, the park continues to host little league games, serving as a cornerstone of our community and a lasting testament to his legacy.

Mr. Chalk's contributions extend far beyond the ballpark. He has inspired countless individuals through his unwavering commitment to giving back. His life is a shining example of what it means to lead by example and to sacrifice for the betterment of others. No one has given more freely of their time and effort for the community, especially for its children. In summary, Mr. Louis Chalk embodies the principles and values that the Frankston High School Wall of Honor seeks to celebrate. His profound and lasting impact on our community—and particularly its youth—makes him an ideal candidate for this recognition. I can think of no one more deserving of this honor than Louis Chalk.

Thank you for considering this nomination.

Sincerely,

Britt Bacon
